Farm 'Deal' By Roosevelt Paves Way to Adjournment

La Follette Protests as Important Measures Are Railroaded.

By Robert C. Albright.

Tunneling through a mountain of legislation, Congress yesterday hit a galloping stride toward adjournment by striking a farm "deal" with the President and cutting a swath in the bills that bar recess.

An end to the immediate farm dilemma came at a White House conference between the President and a Senate delegation. Mr. Roosevelt agreed to make price-pegging loans to farmers, if Congress will give crop control legislation No. 1 consideration next session.

The Senate late yesterday completed its end of the bargain by passing and sending to the House a resolution making some crop control measure the first order of business when Congress meets again.

Sugar "Compromise" Voted.

In the Senate, the so-called sugar marketing "compromise" was passed over the President's objections after two days of debate. Then Vice President Garner whipped other bills to passage so rapidly that Senator Robert M. LaFollettee, jr., Wisconsin, protested, and Garner defended his tactics.

In the House, the wages and hours bill, alone on the President's "desirable" list almost hopelessly lost, needed only a decent Rules Committee burial. In 4½ hours the House passed a modified reorganization bill, still giving the President wide powers to shift and abolish agencies.

The House Banking Committee finally shook loose the Wagner housing bill, already passed by the Senate but so greatly modified by the House group that its Senate author would not recognize it.

Two major items alone remained for the Senate to pass on before its adjournment decks wi" be cleared—disposal of Senator Hugo Black's nomination to the Supreme Court, and tax loophole-plugging legislation. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley said adjournment by August 21 is still possible.

The bill to close tax law seepage was unanimously approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee, with $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 in savings claimed for it by Chairman Robert L. Doughton. The House will act first on this measure, and the Senate hopes to get it late next week.

Bills sent hurtling through the Senate under the gentle persuasion of the Vice President's gavel in a half-hour yesterday included:

Navy, Army Housing Bills.

The Copeland $24,877,000 Ohio River Valley flood control bill, amended to permit the President to exempt localities from making contributions to Federal projects. The bill was sent back to the House.

The Walsh $6,099,000 naval housing bill, providing a public works program at naval shore stations. A $16,000,000 naval supply depot at Oakland, Calif., was eliminated, with $2,600,000 in Parris Island,

Senate Group Approves Black For Court Despite Legal Doubt

Borah Yields in Subcommittee; to Question Eligibility Because of Vote Record; Austin Lone 'No.'

Overriding constitutional questions raised by an opposition minority, a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday recommended Senate confirmation of Senator Hugo L. Black, Alabama Democrat, to be a United States Supreme Court justice.

But full committee action was delayed until Monday by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, with his familiar rejoinder, "No haste." Sub-committee approval was voted 5 to 1. Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, voted "no."

Rumblings from Black's political past meantime were heard in the Senate, where some Democratic opponents admitted privately they were investigating the Alabaman's reputed former Ku Klux Klan backing and possible associations in his State.

Austin Raises Barrier.

Although opposition was developing, primarily because of so-called legal barriers to appointment of any Senator who participated in the recent Supreme Court retirement legislation, his confirmation at this stage appeared assured.

Senator Austin, acting minority leader of the Senate, contends the retirement act actually increased the emoluments of Supreme Court office, and Senators who voted for such an increase are specifically barred by the Constitution.

Austin also raised the question of whether the retirement act had not actually increased the size of the court, by creating the office of full pay, retired justice

President Answers.

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt replied to the legal argument. He said Attorney General Homer S. Cummings informed him that Black's nomination was perfectly legal and Constitutional in every way.

The President received reporters while the Senate sub-committee was still deliberating Black's appointment. Mr Roosevelt said Cummings had given him an informal and verbal opinion. The President denied reports that he is going to propose a Constitutional amendment affecting Supreme Court reorganization.

Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, who first raised in the Senate the question of whether a vacancy actually exists by contending retired Justice Willis Van Devanter still has full justice status, voted for Black's confirmation.

Borah Reserves Attack.

But Borah reserved the right to later bring up the Constitutional question. He said he voted for Black's confirmation yesterday on the basis of the Alabaman's personal fitness, without regard to the legal issue

Other members of the sub-committee voting for Black were Senators Neely, West Virginia; Dieterich, Illinois; Logan, Kentucky, and McGill, Kansas, all Democrats

The Klan issue was being raised quietly by Senators who declined to be quoted, but who said studies were being made of the Klan's reputed backing of Black in his first race for the Senate, and even reports of former Klan connections.

At least two Democratic opponents said privately they were making such an inquiry. Republican opponents for the most part were basing their objections on the Constitutional issues and said they would steer clear of the Alabaman's political past.

"Impartiality" Requisite.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, was asked how he thought it mght affect availability for the court "assuming any Senator had former Klan backing." Burke said he knew nothing of Black's political background, but would answer the question "in general."

"I consider," said Burke, "that foremost among the qualifications for any justice should be complete impartiality, tolerance and fairness. From what I know of the Klan, I do not see how any member of it could possess those qualifications."

Burke, who with Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, objected to Black's immediate confirmation by the Senate, was basing

$1,225,000 Provided for Employables; Jail Seeks Advance.

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday asked a huge increase in its 1939 budget, amounting to $4,358,297 beyond the 1938 budget of $6,964,270.

Auditor Donovan, stunned by an increase amounting to 50 per cent demanded by the school board earlier this week, was even more amazed at the 63 per cent increase asked by the welfare department.

By fare the largest item on the list of increases was brand new, $1,225,000 asked for aid to employables, or those able to work but unable to find it. "The need for relief funds for employables has been demonstrated during the past year," the report says. "The situation is becoming more acute since there has been a sharp reduction in the Works Progress Administration."

The new relief for employables is based on an estimated 3,000 families and single persons per month to receive an average monthly grant of $30. An additional staff of 12 per cent is recommended to administer this vast new undertaking, for which no money was appropriated.

Second largest increase calls for $611,250 in new funds for relief of unemployables, including children. This is almost half again as much as was granted for 1938, raising the cost of maintaining the unemployables from $1,411,500 to $2,022,750.

Reason for the increase is a raise per family from the $30 a month granted now. During the past year there were about 3,350 families receiving such relief, plus 1,000 dependent children who received public aid. Part of the increase will go for additional help in the public assistance division. Administration costs 12 per cent.

Third big item on the request is for $559,350 for additions to the workhouse and reformatory. "In order to relieve congestion, provide for an acceptable death house and

Approximately 1,000 young men and women marched through the Loop to the city hall bearing signs that set forth:

The demonstrators were pledged to distribute 200,000 ballots to residents of apartment buildings, hotels and rooming houses. Recipients were requested to vote "yes" or "no" on this question:

"In strict confidence and at on expense to you, would you like to be given, by your own physcilan, a blood test for syphilis?"

Already 500,000 questionnaires have been sent out by mail.

The committee in charge of the drive hopes actually to begin examinations before October 1.

Tomorrow the campaign chiefs plan to send an airplane over the city, trailing a banner with this message:

"Chicago—fight syphilis — vote today."

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Shanghai, Aug. 13.—Japan's military juggernaut this week added China's ancient capital and her second busiest port to Nippon's continental possessions.

It also inscribed a chapter in Oriental history as gory as any devoted to Italy's holy crusade in Abyssinia or to the little world war in Spain.

Frightened by Japan's new continental ventures, the Chinese here charged the Tokyo government with deliberately aggravating an insignificant skirmish into a major conflict, with the seizure of two more Chinese provinces.

The data marshaled against the Japanese army is as impressive as were the accusations leveled during the Manchurian incident and the subsequent stages of Japan's imperial expansion.

Briefly the facts are as follows:

On the night of July 7, a group of Japanese soldiers holding night maneuvers on Chinese soil were fired upon by Chinese soldiers, who possibly misunderstood the Japanese intentions. The Japanese troops did not reply and there were no casualties.

The following morning the Jap-

Shanghai (Saturday), Aug. 14.—Chinese warplanes took to the air in Shanghai's "second war" today, bombing the Japanese flagship Idzumo, tied up off the Japanese consulate, and the Japanese-owned Kungdah Cotton Mill in Rangkew, on the left bank of the Whangpoo.

Six planes staged a spectacular dawn raid on the cruiser, but their bombs apparently missed their mark. When the smoke cleared away, the cruiser appeared undamaged. Japanese bluejackets could be seen feverishly preparing for resumption of the attack, and the Idzumo's anti-aircraft guns blazed in reply.

Flames rose above the Kungdah mill after the attack.

The Chinese planes, after bombing the mill, used as a Japanese marine headquarters, flew downstream, indicating a possibility they might attempt to bomb Japanese destroyers anchored a mile apart, in the Whangpoo River and attempt to silence two Japanese destroyers bombarding Chinese positions downstream.

Martial Law Declared.

Shanghai was a city of chaos.

Flames shot up from several Chinese sections in Chapei, fired by Japanese incendiary shells.

The crash of shells and air bombs, machine-gun firing and the roar of warplanes drowned out other sounds.

Japanese and Chinese artillery blazed at each other, endangering the lives of 3,500,000, including 4,000 Americans and 45,000 other foreigners. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Chinese and Japanese were killed or wounded.

Then the heavy guns pointed to a spot half a mile west of the station. Several buildings in line of fire began to burn.

The Japanese apparently were trying to cut the railway and prevent Chinese from bringing up reinforcements.

By the Associated Press.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 13.—Veteran pilots of Alaska's far-flung airways prepared tonight to search for six Russian transpolar fliers, long overdue here from Moscow on the course of a possible airline to America.

The big four-motored transport, piloted by the veteran Sigismund Levaneffsky, was scheduled to make a refueling stop here before continuing to Oakland, Calif.

Levaneffsky, who estimated 30 hours would be required for the 4,000-mile flight here, had not reported his position for more than 20 hours.

Alaskan fliers, veterans of many a Northland mercy flight, volunteered to begin a search at dawn tomorrow if the plane still as unreported.

In Seattle, one authoritative source close to flight headquarters expressed belief an Arctic storm may have written a grim finale to the spectacular flight, third such Russian trip this summer.

Measure Rushed Through; Bill to Improve Other Terminal Pending.

By unanimous consent the Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House the King bill providing for construction of an airport at Camp Springs, Md., with Federal funds. The May bill for the improvement of Washington Airport is pending in the Senate having been passed already by the House.

Under the bill passed yesterday, the Secretary of War would be authorized to acquire 2,500 acres of land by purchase or condemnation "on which to locate this public airport."

The sum of $3,268,250 would be expended by the Federal Government in the development of the air terminal under the terms of the measure.

The May bill for the improvement of Washington Airport has been awaiting Senate action for several days. If amended by the Senate to include the filling in of Boundary Channel, construction of two new runways at the terminal will be made possible.

The measure also provides Military road, which crosses the field, shall be abandoned and a substitute road constructed.

Wage-Hour Measure Junked By Rules Committee of House

Decision Against Reporting Bill Virtually Blocks Action at This Session; Only Roosevelt Can Save It.

By Sidney Olson.

The wages-hours bill died in the House yesterday, with its resurrection possible only by a legislative miracle, the chamber's leaders privately agreed last night.

The Administration's last major measure planned on a vast scale to bring higher wages and a shorter work week to the millions who make up the "submerged third," was "gassed in the House Rules Committee's lethal chamber," according to one Democratic chieftain.

Nine members of the 14 men on the Rules Committee still stood adamant against giving the bill a favorable rule to allow it to reach the floor, where its passage is certain.

Only one of the most miraculous reversals in the history of this Congress could suddenly overturn this majority observers agreed.

Meanwhile Speaker William B. Bankhead flatly and definitely quashed any hope that the bill might come up for consideration Monday by the simple process of a motion that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill with amendments. A two-thirds majority would then be required to pass the bill and the motion.

Bankhead said simply that he will not recognize any member for any such motion on Monday—the only day when such a motion is in order. He did not explain his position.

D. C. Gretna Green for Child Brides Doomed; President Signs Marriage Reform Measure

The marriage of a 9-year-old Tennessee mountain girl last spring, together with an expose of "child brides" that followed, had a sequel affecting Washington yesterday when President Roosevelt signed a bill reforming the marriage laws here.

The new law, which takes effect 30 days after its enactment, changes minimum marrying ages and provides a period for thought for would-be married couples.

Whereas boys may now marry at 16, they will have to be 18 in the future, while girls, who may marry now at 14, will have to be 16.

After applying for a marriage license, couples will have to wait three days before it is issued to them. This is designed to prevent so-called "gin marriages" and to give couples time to think it over.

The bill was introduced last May by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Representative Virginia Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, amended Dirksen's bill by providing for the three-day wait for the issuance of licenses, a requirement that is being adopted in many parts of the country.

Washington always has been something of a Mecca for marrying couples from out of town, and a few clergymen here have profited as a result. There used to be one who gave taxicab drivers a part of his fee for bringing couples to him.

Ultimately Maryland may have the three-day rule also. The State soon will have a referendum on such a requirement, which is aimed at Elkton, Maryland's Gretna Green.

$200,000,000 Cut Off Housing Bill as House Committee Revamps Measure

Slum Proposal Reported After Days of Dispute

Bond Authorization Pared, Local Communities' Burden Increased.

Slicing $200,000,000 from the proposed $700,000,000 housing bond authorization and placing a larger slum clearance burden on local communities, the House Banking Committee yesterday generally revamped a modified Wagner housing bill, and reported it to the House.

Almost completely rewritten, the slum clearance measure was revised from stem to stern after days of committee controversy. One of the last of the major measures on the President's "desirable" list, the bill will take its place near the top of the House calendar.

Committee changes were predominantly of a modifying nature, but in one instance the group liberalized a restriction placed by the Senate on cost of the low-cost housing units. A Senate amendment limited cost of family units to $4,000, or $1,000 a room.

Removes Limitations.

The House committee amendment would remove this limitation and substitute a formula requiring the cost to be limited to the average for comparable privately-built houses in the same locality. In no case could the cost be more than $5,000 a unit.

Higher local contributions, bitterly opposed by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, in the Senate, were voted by the group.

The Senate voted only 5 per cent local contributions toward construction costs. But the House Banking Committee limited housing loans to 85 per cent of the development or acquisition cost of any project, the remaining 15 per cent to come from local funds.

Provision for alternative outright capital grants was left in the bill, but further modified to require localities to put up 25 per cent, instead of 20 per cent, if the Government authorized a 40 per cent grant.

Provided $26,000,000.

The Senate measure appropriated $26,000,000, mainly to provide Federal annual contributions toward a rental subsidy for low-cost housing tenants. It required localities to put up only 5 per cent of this subsidy. The revamped House bill stipulated localities must provide 25 per cent of the local contribution in the form of cash, remittance of taxes, or tax exemptions. Local contributions could not be in the form of "community services," such as water rent.

Carefully removed from the bill by the House committee were all authorizations for construction of playgrounds, recreational centers and parking areas, and frequent references to "demonstration projects." Authority for "experimental construction" and surveys also was eliminated.

The committee also struck out a page and a half declaration of "policy" it considered unnecessary, as well as two pages of "standards" designed to guide the new Housing Authority in allotting its funds.

Other Changes.

Other changes by the House Banking Committee:

Provided the new slum dwelling tenants must be drawn from families whose net income does not exceed six times the proposed rental.

Eliminated Civil Service requirements for Federal housing officers and experts, and struck out a requirement that all employes receiving more than $4,000 annually be confirmed by the Senate.

Administration by one $10,000 administrator aided by a nine-man nonsalaried board, rather than the Senate three-man housing authority. Continued Senate provision for Interior Department jurisdiction, over Wagner's protests.

Sixty-year contracts for Federal contributions were required to undergo "re-examination" after ten years, and every five years thereafter. The Senate bill provided re-examination after 20 years, and every ten years thereafter.

Reduced the amount that could be allotted to any one State from 20 per cent to 10 per cent, Wagner had estimated in the Senate that New York had about 10 per cent of the population. The amendment was designed to assure wide distribution of the funds to slums in States outside of New York.

Politics and People

'Devil's Advocate' Urges Scrutiny of Senator Black's Reputed Ku Klux Klan Connection.

By Franklyn Waltman

ON a former occasion the conductor of this column likened his role to that of the official at the Vatican formally known as the "promoter of the faith," but informally known as the "devil's advocate," whose duty it is to oppose with all his vigor nominations for sainthood in order that the Catholic Church in this sacred undertaking might avoid errors.

WALTMAN.

Thus, the conductor of this column in the past has used whatever talents he possesses for criticizing various New Deal projects in order to evoke controversy, and thus bring out the whole truth. On occasion, he has become the champion of what many regarded as the worse cause for the sake of argument and establishing the truth of the better cause. Thus, he has sought to be a "promoter of the faith" in our American institutions and democracy.

If ever a devil's advocate is needed in American life, it is when a nomination is made to the Supreme Court. Elevation to that tribunal truly places a man among the anointed in this life. Nothing but death or his own deliberate misconduct can remove him from that bench against his will. There he sits in judgment on the Nation, and, with four of his associates, can deprive men of their most cherished rights and thwart the will of the President and of Congress.

The time to be critical of Supreme Court appointments, therefore, is not after they are made and confirmed but before the nominees ascend that bench. The constitutional fathers did not trust the President alone to select the members of that tribunal, but made the Senate a party to that undertaking. They fully intended the Senate should adopt a critical attitude toward such nominees and subject them to the severest scrutiny without regard to personal or partisal considerations.

In the case of the nomination of Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, for a place on the Supreme Court, the Senate does not appear inclined, as evidenced by the action of its Judiciary sub-committee yesterday, to fulfill the duty laid on it by the Constitution. There is still hope a devil's advocate may rise in the Senate. At least this devil's advocate proposes to do his duty.

In the first place, none who has talked with numerous Senators within the last two days can believe that if Hugo Black were not a member of the Senate he would be confirmed—or at least, that he would not be subjected to a severe scrutiny. Only the clubby atmosphere which exists in the Senate, whereby one who has once entered those portals is never more challenged, assures Senator Black of confirmation.

And, of course, that is the real reason why President Roosevelt named Senator Black, plus the fact that he has unswervingly supported the New Deal. The latter is not a valid objection to Mr. Black. One would not expect Mr. Roosevelt to appoint anyone not among his partisans. But at least he might have named a New Dealer with undisputed legal talent and a man of judicious temperament, such as Felix Frankfurter or Judge Sam G. Bratton.

The very fact that Senator Black's nomination was such a surprise when every conceivable possibility for the appointment had been listed and discussed indicates that few, if any, seriously regarded the Alabaman as of Supreme Court caliber. Moreover, even newspapers in his own State, swallowing local pride, sorrowfully question in their editorials his fitness for the Supreme Court.

And then there arises the question of his legal eligibility under the Constitution. The Judiciary sub-committee washes its hands of that question. Yet the greatest doubt exists as to whether a Senator can be named to the Van Devanter vacancy. If the Senate ignores that phase of the matter, it will be certain to return to haunt the Court and Senator Black.

Without doubt, counsel for the public utilities coming before the court at the next term in opposition to legislation affecting their clients will challenge the constitutional right of Senator Black to sit in judgment on them. Then the court will be forced to examine the credentials of its new member and perhaps may be put to the embarrassment of rejecting him. In that event, we suppose, the President will commence to lambast the court again.

That this question should at least be thoroughly explored is emphasized by the views some Senators hold. For instance, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney during the hearings on the court reorganization bill made this statement:

"I want to point out that I know this committee (Judiciary) recently reported to the Senate the bill providing for the retirement of judges of the Supreme Court, and that was done with the full knowledge that by so doing they were probably increasing the emoluments of the court and making it impossible for any member of this committee, or any member of the Senate or any member of the House, to become appointed to the courts."

Aside from all of the foregoing, there is one aspect of the situation which certainly should be cleaned up before Senator Black is confirmed, and that is his reputed connection with the Ku Klux Klan. That is a general topic of conversation among Senators in their offices and cloakrooms. None yet has had the hardihood to discuss the matter in public. This, however, is not a time to be squeamish.

As a member of the Supreme Court Senator Black would pass on the religious and civic rights of Jews, Catholics, colored and foreign-born as well as American-born and Protestant. A goodly part of the opposition to the President's court reorganization plan came from these groups because they regarded the tribunal as the last bulwark of their liberties and they feared any tampering with it.

If Senator Black has been a member of the Ku Klux Klan, or if he solicited the support of that organization to win his Senate seat, he is not a fit person to sit in judgment over the rights of minorities against which that organization was directed—or over the rights of any group. Such action goes to the very roots of the question of Senator Black's fitness. A man throughout his life may make mistakes and mend his ways, but he cannot absolve himself of membership or association with the Ku Klux Klan—an organization based on bigotry and intolerance—because that indicates an enduring state of mind.

If the people of Alabama wish to be represented in the Senate by a Klansman, that is their privilege. If the Klan dominates the voters of Alabama, it is their right to elect the Senators from that State. None in another State may say nay to them. But placing a representative of the Klan on the Supreme Court is an entirely different matter.

I do not know whether Senator Black was ever a member of the Klan. Nor do I know of my own knowledge that he won his Senate seat in 1926 as a result of Klan support. Close friends of Senator Black have told me he privately has denied to them he was ever a member of the Klan. Others have told me that without question or doubt he was elected in 1926 as the Klan candidate.

Be that as it may, I do know that former Senator Oscar W. Underwood, whom Senator Black succeeded, refused to stoop to the Klan and voluntarily retired from public life. I do know that it is difficult to find a sketch of Senator Black which does not contain some reference to the Ku Klux Klan. He has been heralded from coast to coast as a beneficiary of Klan support—and even as a seeker of that support.

Before me are several articles regarding Senator Black. I pick up the Washington Daily News, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, which has been sympathetic to the New Deal, and I find in a story by the "Scripps-Howard Alliance," which means their staff writers, these words:

"Ku Klux Klan support is credited with sending Black to the Senate his first term. He was a member of the Klan, according to former Klansmen who are his friends. With Imperial Wizard James Esdale escorting him about the State, he was introduced to Klan organizations and was pledged their political support. The Klan had disbanded when he made his next race in 1932."

I pick up a copy of the Review of Reviews for April, 1934, and find a friendly article about Senator Black by Raymond Clapper, one of his admirers, in which it is stated he was "elected to the Senate under suspicion of Ku Klux Klan backing in 1926" and further on a reference to the fact that Underwood "felt he could not stoop to the kind of campaign that conditions in Alabama might require, so he stepped down and out" and that Senator Black had "the indorsement of the American Federation of Labor and it was said that the Klan supported him."

I pick up a copy of Time magazine for August 26, 1935, and in a sketch of Senator Black in connection with his investigation of the public utilities lobby appears this statement:

"In 1926 the late Oscar W. Underwood, disgusted with Alabama politics, announced his retirement from the Senate. Unknown Hugo Black was the dark horse in a five-man primary for the Underwood seat. Without any prominent support, he put on a wrinkled suit, climbed into a Model-T Ford, stumped the State, sleeping with any farmer who would put him up, speaking at every crossroads store, saying the right words to win Ku Klux Klan support. That year, a low in Alabama politics, Ku Kluxers helped put Hugo Black in the United States Senate. Elevation to the Senate did not make Hugo Black politically potent, but it enabled him to become politically respectable."

I pick up a clipping from the New York Times of August 9, 1926, on the eve of the Alabama Senatorial primary, and in a story from Birmingham, Ala., I find that the "Ku Klux Klan is reported to have split and will throw its support, at one time supposed to be solid for Musgrove, approximately half and half for Musgrove and Black," and further on the assertion that "Black has devoted part of his late campaigning to voicing oppositio to Gov. Al Smith in an effort to hold his part of the Klan support."

I have made no effort to search the files and libraries for references to Senator Black's association with the Klan. The excerpts quoted were taken from articles which came as the result of an ordinary request for biographical material. Anyone pursuing the inquiry undoubtedly could find many more—and where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire.

14 Rail Unions Ratify Pay Rise Of $98,000,000

5-Cent Hourly Increase Approved Following Bitter Disputes.

By the United Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Fourteen non-operating railroad brotherhoods tonight ratified a $98,000,000 annual wage increase for the 800,000 non-operating employes of the Nation's railroads.

"The men didn't think the 5 cents an hour raise was enough but were willing to accept it under the circumstances," said George M. Harrison, of Cincinnati, chairman of the unions' wage committee. The pay raise agreement is retroactive to August 1.

Ratification took more than six hours and was marred, at times, by bitter disputes. The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers were the last of the 14 unions to approve the settlement.

Asked 20-Cent Raise.

The unions originally asked a raise of 20 cents an hour but this was rejected by the railway operators.

Even as the pay raise was ratified, some of the railroads announced they were laying off men "because of increased operating costs and declining business."

The Burlington said it was cutting its force by 300 men, and the Milwaukee also announced a general reduction in forces. L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central, said some men were being dropped.

A meeting between the "big five" operating brotherhoods and the railway executives, who are attempting to compromise union demands for annual wage increases totaling $110,000,000, was adjourned until Monday. Little progress has been made in the first three days of negotiations, a spokesman for the railroads said.

Weir Defies Labor Board.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 13 (AP).—E. T. Weir's Weirton Steel Co. today challenged the right of the National Labor Relations Board to conduct a hearing on charges that the company intimidated its employes in opposing the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The steel company asked for dismissal of the board's complaint, asserting the board acted "in concert" with the union in making its charges.

Regional Labor Board Director Charles T. Douds refused the company's request and said a hearing on the complaint would be held next Monday in New Cumberland, W. Va.

The complaint was "the result of an arrangement" between the board and the union to "assist the S. W. O. C. in its efforts to force Weirton employes against their wishes" to join the C. I. O. affiliate, the company declared.

Welfare Board to Seek Budget Boost

facilities, and to begin to remedy the oppressive situation found at the present jail," the report says, "request is made for a sum not to exceed $240,000."

"It is proposed to construct a wall around the present jail property," the report continues, "and to construct in addition an administration building in front of and connected with the present jail, such addition to provide suitable admission facilities, administrative offices, medical examination, hospital facilities and a new death house and death cells. This proposal is part of the general proposal to replace the jail on the present ground, saving the walls of the present structure.

"The total building will be conducted in such a way that use of the present facilities will be continuous with the new construction, modern in type. The present location is preferred because of its accessibility to the police department, Department of Justice and courts, and to the universities with which we anticipate a close relationship.

"In addition its proximity to Gallinger Hospital is an added benefit. The total construction as estimated will not exceed $1,500,000. It is proposed that this structure be built by contract and not by prison labor with the proviso that the brick be procured from the penal institutions' working capital fund."

Portable Houses Asked.

An additional request for $10,000 for portable houses within the jail walls to relieve present congestion, in which short-term prisoners would be confined, was also asked. A grim item on the bill was $300 for "electrocutions."

Old-age assistance ranked fourth in increases in the estimate, totaling $751,730—a rise of $323,465 over the current cost. Bulk of the expense is for new cases which will come under the law. It was estimated 3,500 aged would be receiving $360 each per year in 1939, with 31 new employes needed costing $30,000.

A District Training School costing $275,000 was asked, most of which would go for four new dormitories totaling $180,000. "Our population has increased so we now have approximately 50 patients in excess of our normal capacity," the report says. Milkhouse, steam tunnels, and a sewage treatment plant for the school bring the total up $275,000.

To complete construction of a penitentiary for hardened long-term prisoners at Lorton, $57,000 more was asked. Personnel for it will cost $4,470. It is to open January 1, 1939.

Receiving Home for Children put in a bill for $213,000 beyond its previous request, explaining it seeks the money for a new home. The remodeled apartment building at 816 Potomac avenue southeast now in use was considered unsatisfactory for future use.

The Board of Public Welfare headquarters services would be expanded also. It asked for a total of $32,000 beyond its previous needs, with a $5,600-a-year psychiatrist, a $2,600-a-year psychologist, and 10 social service workers at $1,800, plus four stenographers at $1,440 being requested. The personal service of the board item was $129,700.

Bill Creating Department of Welfare Voted

House Sends Much-Altered Second Reorganization Measure to Senate.

The second of the four Government reorganization bills drafted by the White House, creating a Department of Welfare and giving the President authority to abolish, transfer and consolidate many Government agencies, passed the House last night and went to the Senate.

Piloted by Representative Lindsay C. Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, the bill, greatly modified in contrast with the original White House program, sailed serenely through to victory on almost strictly partisan lines.

The House several weeks ago passed the first of the four reorganization bills—a measure giving the President six administrative assistants—but the Senate has failed to act on it as yet, preferring its own omnibus measure in which all phases of Governmental reorganization are contained in a single bill.

Widely Changed.

The reorganization bill passed yesterday was a far different act from the original White House recommendations. Although it gave the President specific power to shift, transfer and abolish Federal agencies, it listed 12 specific exemptions of independent commissions, and prevents the President from abolishing any executive department.

Exempted from Presidential interference were the General Accounting Office, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the United States Maritime Commission, the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, the Coast Guard and the United States Tariff Commission.

Assailed by G. O. P.

The provision for a new Cabinet Department of Welfare, to group under it all public health, education and welfare activities of the Federal Government, was vigorously opposed by the Republican members led by Representative John Taber, of New York, but the vast Democratic majority easily defeated his amendment to strike this from the bill.

Taber charged the new department would be "a propaganda agency to perpetuate relief in the years to come."

Enemy 'Menaces' All New England In Army Games

Boston, Aug. 13 (AP).—A coalition of mythical foreign powers, taking advantage tonight of the concentration of the American Navy in Pacific waters, menaced New England's vast industrial centers and heavily populated area.

To meet the pending invasion, the entire American First Army was ordered into action from Maine to Virginia.

That, briefly was the outline made public by Army headquarters of a command post exercise designed to determine the effectiveness of the Nation's defense measures.

The First Army comprises troops, regulars and National Guardsmen in the 12 Eastern States, 176,180 men. The vast war game will have ramifications in all sections of the northern Atlantic seacoast. Just when and where the invaders will strike is as yet unknown.

Doctor Believed Victim of Poison

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 13 (AP).—State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb said tonight he had been informed the death of Dr. Armen Greenhut, physician convicted of criminally attacking a 13-year-old schoolgirl patient, probably was due to poison.

Dr. Greenhut, 39-year-old Austrian-born war veteran and physician, practicing at Dundalk, outside Baltimore, was found dead in his jail cell here last Saturday, the day after he was convicted by a Harford County jury.

McNabb said Dr. J. Howard Maldeis, of Baltimore, who performed an autopsy, reported that indications were Dr. Greenhut had taken a poison.

Air Comedian Divorced.

Reno, Aug. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Myriel Labriola won an uncontested divorce on grounds of cruelty today from Antonio Labriola, radio comedian known as "Oswald." They were married December 17, 1932, and have a daughter, Joyce, 3.

Report for Unseating Rep. Jenks Reaches Floor of House Over Republican Objections.

REPUBLICANS FAILED yesterday in an attempt to keep from the House floor a report of its Elections Committee recommending the unseating of Representative Arthur B. Jenks, Republican, of the First New Hampshire District. The committee recommended Jenks' seat be given to Alphonse Roy, Democrat. Its findings were based on an election contest.

Representative Tobey, New Hampshire Republican, raised a parliamentary point of order against the report, but was overruled. He said House rules made it mandatory the report be filed within six months after the opening of the session.

Representative Snell (Republican), New York, minority leader, appealed from the Speaker's ruling. The House tabled the appeal by a standing vote of 212 to 63.

On Snell's demand, a roll call was ordered. The resultant vote was 285 for and 69 against.

VICE PRESIDENT GARNER named Senators Bailey and Reynolds, of North Carolina, to a Senate committee to attend the Virginia Dare celebration August 18 at Roanoke Island, N. C.

The North Carolinians replaced Senators Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and Charles L. McNary (Republican), Washington, who informed the Vice President they would be unable to attend.

President Roosevelt is scheduled to attend the celebration, commemorating the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare.

THE SENATE BANKING Committee approved a bill, already passed by the House, to revise the 1933 farm-credit act and related legislation.

Governor William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, said the measure, termed the farm-credit act of 1937 would permit reamortization and extension of land-bank commissioner loans where borrowers were unable to meet 10 per cent amortization charges now coming due.

Wednesday Set For Closing of Old Chain Span

Demolition Work Scheduled to Get Under Way Immediately.

Chain Bridge, which has seen the horseback rider give way to the carriage driver and the carriage driver to the motorist, received its death sentence yesterday after 63 years of service.

The historic structure will be closed Wednesday to make way for the march of progress. Eight months after its last girder is down a modern bridge will replace it, costing $338,000.

While the new bridge is under consrtuction, residents of the section will have to use either Key or Arlington Bridges.

Part of the old bridge will remain as the bulwark of the new, the piers being saved. The old piers, however, will be enlarged and reinforced.

The new bridge will have sidewalks skirting the roadway, which is to be 10 feet wider than the old narrow 20-foot strip of Chain Bridge.

Water mains which now serve Arlington County and are supported by Chain Bridge, will be laid across the Potomac River bed without suspension of service.

Bandit Uses Toy Gun.

LaGuardia Scorns Copeland Inquiry

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia rejected today suggestions that he or members of his administration participate in an investigation of the legality of nominating petitions filed for U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland, his Tammany opponent for the Republican mayoralty nomination.

The mayor's action followed announcement by the law committee of the New York County Republican committee that they had found "apparent" evidences of fraud in the Copeland petitions. "If there is evidence of fraud that is a matter for the district attorney," Mayor LaGuardia said. "As to the filing of protests, I am not interested."

Bridges Hints At Collusion in Mail Blocking

Senator Asks Inquiry of Postoffice-C. I. O. Link in Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, demanded in the Senate yesterday a "thorough investigation" of handling of the mails in recent labor disputes.

Bridges told the Senate the Committee for Industrial Organization had been responsible for preventing delivery of mail to strike-bound plants and charged recent hearings of the Senate Postoffice Committee showed "evidence" of an agreement between strikers and postal officials.

The New Hampshire Senator was the author of a resolution submitted to the Senate earlier this year calling for an investigation of alleged interference with the mails. The Senate Postoffice Committee held hearings on the resolution and reported it adversely with Bridges casting the only dissenting vote.

Food Delivered in 1936.

Bridges submitted to the Senate an affidavit from "an official" of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, which he said showed foodstuffs were delivered by the Postoffice Department to Goodyear plants during a strike in 1936.

Postal officials testified at hearings on the Bridges resolution that the department refused mail consigned to strike-bound steel plants if it was "irregular" in character. Food and clothing were described as irregular.

"Mr. President," Bridges said, "I ask you to think about this 'irregular' mail delivery because in this 1936 strike it was not the question of parcel post packages of wives, mothers and sisters or workers in the plant, but it was the delivery of packages from Armour & Co., containing ham, bacon, eggs, fresh rolls, butter, cheese and other food products in the sum total of approximately 48,000 pounds.

Motive Questioned.

"In the period of little over one month in 1936 the United States mail delivered almost one ton of food a day to a strike-bound plant with no question of 'irregularity,' with no agreements with strikers and with but one attempt at interference.

"What has occasioned this change in the policy of our Postoffice Department? Surely it cannot be said that it was any more usual for a tire and rubber company to feed its non-striking employes tons of food in 1936 than it was usual for a steel company to attempt to feed its non-striking employes food sent through United States mails in 1937."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, interrupted to ask whether the New Hampshire Senator was "interested in improving the efficiency of the postoffice" or was "dealing with political matter sent out by the Republican headquarters."

Mass Funeral Set For 5 in Drowning

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 13 (AP).—Mass funeral services will be held here Sunday for the five victims of a Sunday school picnic drowning tragedy near St. Martin's.

The last of the bodies of the young victims was recovered today by Coast Guardsmen. The five who died when they stepped into a hole in the bay floor were Margaret West, 13; Daniel West, 22; Howard Aydelotte, 16; Naldia West, 16, and Katharine Davis, 14.

Woman Admits Buying a Bottle Of Deadly Drug

Laughs When Charge Is Made; Four Other Deaths Checked.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—A warrant charging Mrs. Anna Hahn with the murder of George Gsellman, 67, was issued today as police pushed their investigation into four other deaths of elderly German acquaintances of the blonde, 31-year-old former German school teacher.

The warrant was signed by Detective Lieut. George W. Schattle after Mrs. Hahn's attorney had filed an application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Mrs. Hahn greeted the filing of the murder charge with the smiling comment: "This is one case I'm going to win. I'll tell you that!"

Police were informed by City Chemist O. P. Behrer that traces of two poisons were found in the vital organs and viscera of Gsellman, who died July 6. Schattle said a woman, identified as Mrs. Hahn, had been seen with Gsellman the night before.

Considers Other Deaths.

Schattle said he was considering the possibility of other "deaths poured from a battle."

Other developments were:

Police said Mrs. Hahn admitted buying in July, 1936, a bottle of poisonous oil such as Dr. Behrer said was detected in the Gsellman viscera.

Police said Mrs. Hahn admitted knowing four of the men whose deaths are being investigated; that she ministered to them during their illnesses, but denied giving them anything harmful. She denied knowing Gsellman.

Police reported the finding in a bathroom to which only Mrs. Hahn and Jacob Wagner, 78, who died June 3, had access, of a bottle bearing the name of a metallic poison.

Poison Death Likely.

Authorities awaiting a toxicologist's report on tests being conducted on Wagner's organs received information from Coroner J. Thomas Coughlan, of Colorado Springs, Colo., that hospital records there indicated George J. Obendoerfer, 67, well-to-do Cincinnati cobbler, might have died from an oil poisoning. Obendoerfer, whom Mrs. Hahn admitted accompanying on a trip to the Colorado resort city, died August 1.

Philip Hahn, telegrapher husband of the woman, told police he knew of his wife's acquaintanceship with only one of the five men whose deaths are being investigated, Ernst Kohler, who died in 1933 leaving a $12,000 house to Mrs. Hahn.

Two Britsh Firms Face Loan Probe

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Charles Poletti today ordered two overseas concerns—the United Kingdom Mercantile and Finance Corporation, Ltd., and the Heilbut Symons & Co., Ltd.—to appear in court on August 19 for an examination of their books and records.

The British firms, Assistant Attorney General A. V. McCall said, have been conducting an international lending business, by advertising in American newspapers, in which the offer of a loan was merely "bait" for securing investors in gold-mine stocks.

"This is apparently a British version of the American 'front money' racket," McCall said, adding that more than 300 American firms had responded to the advertisements.

1,000 Midshipmen Guests at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—Norfolk is host over the week-end to nearly 1,000 midshipmen of the United States Naval Academy, back home after their two months' training cruise of European waters aboard the battleships New York, Arkansas and Wyoming.

The midshipmen's squadron cast anchor in Hampton Roads last night shortly after midnight.

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, commanding the squadron, was formally welcomed to Norfolk today by an official delegation that called on him aboard his flagship, the New York.

Dead Pilot of Airliner Is Absolved in Crash

Colon, Panama, Aug. 13 (AP).—Capt. Stephen Dunn, pilot of the Pan-American-Grace airliner which plunged into the ocean off Panama August 2 with a loss of 14 lives, was cleared of blame today by Army and Navy flying authorities. Dunn was among those killed.

Brig. Gen. George H. Brett, commanding the nineteenth wing at Albrook Army Field, and Commander Ernest L. Gunther, commanding the fleet air base at Coco Solo, said Dunn had taken what was apparently the proper action in trying to land the plane after it had become lost in a storm.

Court Nominee's Son Leads Class in School

St. Petersburg, Fla., Aug. 13 (AP). Hugo Black, jr., young son of President Roosevelt's nominee for the Supreme Court, ranked highest in academic work last term as a freshman cadet at Florida Military Academy here, school officials said today.

Hugo will re-enter the academy in September, accompanied by his younger brother, Sterlin, 12. Hugo served as secretary of his class last year and was a corporal in his cadet company.

Mother Admits Poisoning Son; Suicide Foiled

Also Tried to Kill 2d Child, Woman Says, After Suitor Jilted Her.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 13.—Dry-eyed and composed, Mrs. Lenore King, held for the poisoning of her 6-year-old son, told police today she planned the death of herself, the boy and his sister because a man had spurned her love.

Officers awaited a coroner's inquest tomorrow before asking a warrant charging the 27-year-old woman with having killed her son, Jack King, jr., by giving him a hamburger sandwich on which she had spread poison.

Mrs. King, country newspaper correspondent at St. Clair, Mo., said her plan for ending the lives of herself and her daughter, Jeannine, 5, was frustrated when the girl refused to eat a similar sandwich.

She wished to die, she told police, because a St. Clair youth, eight years her junior, had ceased his attentions, but she did not want to leave her children as a burden on others.

After three months of indecision, she said she came to St. Louis last Monday, hoping that among strangers she would lose her fear of carrying out her plan.

In her room at a small hotel yesterday, she spread poison on the meat of three sandwiches—one for Jack, one for Jeannine, and one for herself. Jack took his sandwich eagerly.

"He gulped it down," she related, "but Jeannine spit out her first mouthful, complaining, 'It's too hot, mother, I can't eat it.'

"When Jeannine refused to eat, I realized I couldn't leave her alone, so I threw the rest of the sandwiches and the poison away."

The boy became violently ill, "continually calling for water and writhing in pain," and died within an hour.

Blown a Mile—Pants Torn.

Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 13 (AP).—Al Ullrich of North Bergen, youthful parachute jumper, was blown a mile by a strong wind, crashed into the side of a house, breaking a window, and was dumped on a porch roof. Total injury—a tear in the seat of his trousers. He had planned to land, yesterday, in front of the "Governor's Day" crowd at Camp Hoffman.

121st Engineers In Training Trip To Gettysburg

Meaning of Famous Battle and Its Lessons Explained to Troops on Tour.

By Capt. Ralph L. Walker,
Judge Advocate, District National Guard

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Md., Aug. 13.—An object military lesson in one of America's greatest battles, Gettysburg, was received by several hundred of the District of Columbia's National Guardsmen this afternoon as officers conducted them over the famous battleground.

A convoy of army trucks, under Maj. Ralph S. Childs, carried guardsmen of the 121st Engineers more than 20 miles through the mountain country to the fields and hills were thousands were killed and wounded.

There were six stops during the Gettysburg tour which lasted two hours. At each point of interest, Capt. E. H. Walter, instructor of the engineers, spoke to the guard through a microphone and explained historical and military lessons.

After the tour, the troops came back to their tent quarters to prepare for tomorrow's instructions and muster, with a review to follow. It was announced the guardsmen of the special troops of the Twenty-ninth Division and the 104th Quartermaster Regiment would be taken to Gettysburg Monday.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commander of the guards, announced that he expected a large number of Washingtonians would visit the camp Sunday and see the big parade which always attracts thousands. Many of the officers will have wives, children and friends as guests.

His Picture Snapped, Unionist Calls Strike

An hour later he reconsidered his action, the electricians returned to work and the station went on the air. Schading, defendant in an injunction suit being tried in the circuit court, was asked to pose for a picture during a recess in the hearing. He refused, then told the photographer: "Go ahead and shoot it. If you do, I'll stop your presses and close your radio station."

Extortion Letters Attributed to 'Crank'

Providence, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP).—Federal investigators and police, probing extortion letters sent to a city official and three prominent business men, tonight attributed the threats to "a crank."

A three-weeks investigation of the letters came to light with a statement by Deputy Tax Collector Philip E. Cunningham that he and "about three" business men had been threatened with death if they did not leave $20,000 each at a designated place.

Steam Shovel Digs For Building Victims

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Searchers, aided by a steam shovel, dug deeper today into the mud and splintered timbers of three tenements which collapsed on Staten Island Wednesday night, in search of two more persons missing in the accident that took 19 lives. Preparations were made for five investigations into the crumbling of the undermined building.

Trusty Jams Traffic.

Indianapolis, Aug. 13 (AP).—A colored trusty attired in a silk hat, a red and white zebra striped shirt and white trousers caused a traffic jam today as amazed motorists stopped to watch him mow the county jail's lawn. A turnkey said friends furnished the outfit.

Another Girl Brutally Slain On Staten Island

4-Year-Old Feared Assault Victim; N. Y. Speeds Sex Crime War.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—Strangled and apparently assaulted, the nude body of 4-year-old Joan Kuleba was found in a lonely marshland bungalow on Staten Island today.

The discovery added explosive impetus to a campaign against sex crimes, already running full tilt in the courts and police department as a result of two similar slayings within a few months.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine rushed special squads of detectives to Staten Island as medical examiners prepared to ascertain whether Joan was another victim of a degenerate. In the rush to reach the scene, the car of Detective William Rudolph crashed into another automobile and he was injured seriously.

She disappeared yesterday while playing on the beach near the home of her aunt, Mrs. Grace Lesandi, who lives about a mile from the bungalow. When her shoes and socks were found under the boardwalk, police assumed she had waded out beyond her depth, and began grappling for her body.

Two fishermen, Harry Elmore and William Hamm, passing the bungalow, glanced through the open cellarway and saw her body.

A rope was looped around her neck and fastened to the cellar door. A half-dozen bricks piled on her back indicated, police said, that her assailant had been frightened away in the act of covering her up. Her red bathing suit was missing.

The girl's unemployed father, William, wept when he identified the body. Joan was his only child. Her mother, gravely ill in Manhattan, was not informed immediately.

Suit Asks Division Of Bladensburg's Peace Cross Plot

Claimants yesterday filed suit at Upper Marlboro, Md., for partition of part of the tract of land on which the Bladensburg Peace Cross is located.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Abbie Keller, of 58 Q street northwest., alleges in the petition the northeastern part of the triangular plot on which the monument is erected is the property of her father, William T. Casey, who died in 1933.

In 1935 the State Legislature authorized the Maryland Roads Commission to investigate the ownership of this land and purchase it "because the use of the tract for commercial purposes would create a serious traffic menace." The roads commission, however, has failed to negotiate, the suit alleges.

Mrs. Keller asks the court to divide the land between seven brothers and sisters. She is represented by Attorneys Robert McCullough and William McGrath.

Fair, Cooler Week-End Forecast for Capital

Washington was promised a fair but definitely cooler week-end. The Weather Bureau forecast indicated it would be partly cloudy and a slight possibility of rain. Moderate temperatures will prevail, however.

Yesterday's rainfall brought the mercury down after it climbed to a high of 85 at 1:50 p. m. Precipitation was .12 of an inch. The low yesterday was at 5 a. m. when the thermometer stood at 69.

Union Painters On U. S. Work Win Demands

Granted Hour, Pay Scale; 11,000,000 Affected, Says Leader.

Union painters in the District won a clear-cut victory yesterday when the Labor Department, in a sweeping decision following a hearing in connection with the recent painters' strike, ruled in their favor as to the duties of a painter, working hours and rates of pay.

The findings of the Labor Department were:

1. That the term "painters" embraces all men whose duties in the course of employment require them to erect scaffolds, move drop cloths, carry supplies and materials, clean paint spots, remove scaffolds, etc., and that such men are entitled to a minimum of $1.57 1-7 an hour.

2. That the regular working week of painters in the District consists of a 7-hour day and 5-day week, and that in future Government contracts this scale must apply. This means that double pay must be given for any work in excess of that standard, or for any work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

A spokesman for the Labor Department denied the report the decision will bar bids by nonunion contractors on Government painting jobs.

The department's ruling was hailed by Bryce P. Holcombe, business manager for the Painters' Union, as "the biggest decision in the history of organized labor in America."

"It (the decision) affects not only the local painters but 11,000,000 nonunion workers on Government jobs all over the country," he said.

Holcombe said the union had spent $22,000 in dues and legal fees to win the decision, but added "it was worth it."

Referring to published reports the Painters' Union had effected a rapproachment with the local Building Trades Council, the business manager for the union painters said:

"That's emphatically wrong. We're not any more friendly than we were. Of course, we're happy that the decision affects them too, but it will be a long time before we forget that they went through our picket lines."

N. Y. Ave. Church To Hear Dr. Smiley

Dr. Raymond W. Smiley, minister of the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Bloomfield, N. J., will be the guest speaker at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow. Dr. Smiley's topic at the morning service at 11 o'clock will be "A Man's Shadow." At the evening vesper hour Dr. Smiley will discuss "The Great Virtue."

The young people of the Christian Endeavor Society will meet at 6:45 o'clock in the lecture room of the church.

On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the midweek prayer service will be observed. The Rev. George H. Cook will deliver the meditation.

Two Men Arrested In Gambling Raids

Two colored men were arrested on charges of operating lotteries yesterday, in two gambling raids by Metropolitan police.

Robert Hatch, 50, 2010 Third street northwest, was taken in a raid in the 1500 block of Seventh street northwest; Maryland Banks, 44, 1314 Ninth street, was taken into custody after a raid in the 700 block of Eighth street northwest.

Both were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and later released on $1,500 bond each.

Hemingway Is Hairy-Chested! Proves It in Literary Tussle

Rows With Max Eastman; Pulls Open Shirt, Throws Book.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—The question whether Ernest Hemingway, writer of short, hard words, has hair on his chest appeared to have been settled tonight after the best literary fight since Theodore Dreiser slapped Sinclair Lewis in the face at the Metropolitan Club in 1931.

The current controversy, which was between Hemingway and Max Eastman, white-haired prophet of proletarian literature, reached its climax last Wednesday in the staid offices of a New York publishing house, it was learned tonight.

After Hemingway had thrown a book at Eastman, then ripped open his shirt to prove it was adorned with hair, and finally was knocked down by Eastman, all the witnesses agreed there was no question about the facts at issue.

Hemingway has hair on his chest.

The dispute, however, started over a more sensitive issue, according to Eastman. He said Hemingway resented an essay he wrote several years ago.

The essay was printed shortly after Hemingway wrote "Death in the Afternoon," and was entitled "Bull in the Afternoon."

"He objected to a paragraph in which I wrote that all people who were sensitive, as artists have to be, are worried for fear we may not be strong enough to meet the world, but that some circumstance seemed to have given Hemingway the feeling he must continually protest his red-blooded masculinity," Eastman explained today.

He said he was unaware of any ill-feeling on Hemingway's part until the author stalked into the publishing office, suddenly tore open his shirt and said:

"Look!"

ERNEST HEMINGWAY.

"He showed me the hair on his chest," Eastman said. "Then he opened my shirt. His fact was as red as a tomato."

Eastman said he laughed, thinking Hemingway was joking, but the novelist suddenly roared:

"Why did you accuse me of being impotent?"

Eastman said he was flabbergasted."

"I never accused him of such a thing," he said.

However, Hemingway suddenly grabbed the book in which the essay was written, which happened to be lying on the desk, thumbed through it and found a paragraph which said Hemingway "represented a new school of fictions, the practitioners of which wore false hair on their chests."

Hemingway assertedly read the passage aloud, then slammed the book in Eastman's face.

Eastman said he jumped for the author, grabbed his throat and threw him across the desk.

"There he lay, with me on top of him," Eastman said. "Then he said, 'All right, Max,' and patted my shoulder. I let him go."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Testimonial.

The dispensers of Government patronage—who will admit that there is a carload of headaches in nearly every plum they hand out—should know of the sweet relief that came upon C. T. "Chappy" Ryan, a dispenser of patronage in Arkansas before the State adopted civil service. The story comes from The Memphis Commercial Appeal:

"C. T. 'Chappy' Ryan, assistant secretary to Governor Bailey who had charge of the 'employment office' before the Governor took office and later dispensed patronage from his capitol building desk is sleeping much better now that civil service has become an actuality.

"'Boy, it's great not to have folks on your neck about some job,' Chappy says. 'I can sleep all night now without getting up to answer the telephone and tell some fellow that I'll do the best I can for him and if we have an opening he'll be given first consideration.'

"Chappy doesn't admit it publicly but now he just says he's sorry, the applicant should have seen him sooner, before the civil service went into effect and tied his hands. All he can tell the job hunter now is to take the examination for the job he wants. Civil service is a good thing in more ways than one."

Surprises.

A gentleman, who requests anonymity, comes to our desk to report a situation that left him alternately surprised, then happy, and finally both happier and much relieved. He had business to transact in the appalling vastness of the New Interior Building, and went there with two apprehensions; he thought he would never, unaided by chart and compass, find his way to the destination and he was a trifle disturbed at the thoughts of confronting uniformed men who would direct him with elbow gestures and unfriendly grunts.

The first surprise, he says, came when a guard behind a desk at a door actually smiled at him. The second surprise came when the guard developed into a most "intelligent and understanding man. With a fine minimum of words, he told me exactly where to go." And the third surprise came when, in talking to the employe he had set out to find, the whole tone was one one of "optimism about the Government service" and how nice it was to work in such a beautiful building where everything "seemed arranged for the comfort and facility of the employes."

Our caller said that he left with the highest notions of Secretary Ickes and everyone in his establishment and the notion was pinned down, once and forever, when the same guard at the door gave "me a parting smile and what actually seemed to be a salute." This column doesn't know who the particular guard was, but the incident occurred on Wednesday morning at the main entrance door.

Lament.

The FCA people lament of how their team lost its first softball championship game, by a score of 8-0, to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Which would seem to be nothing more than might be expected: The F. B. I. men are rigorously trained to be good catchers and are notoriously always on the ball. The F. C. On Wednesday, Aug. 18, the American Federation of Government Employees celebrates its fifth birthday and President Stengle makes a personal appeal to the membership. He says: "I want to appeal to each one of our members to set apart Wednesday, Aug. 18, as a day on which they will secure at least one new member, each, as a token of their love and affection for and loyalty to their organization. This can be done with very little effort and will mean wonders for the future of our federation if it is done wholeheartedly."

Loitering Ban In Courthouse Hits 'Runners'

Order Considered Aimed at Agents for Lawyers Soliciting Clients.

Hereafter "runners" in the employ of progressive criminal lawyers must really run through the corridors of Police Court Building and not loiter in search of prospective customers.

Such is the substance of instructions issued yesterday by Walter F. Bramhall, chief clerk of the court, whose directions that the halls must hereafter be kept clear, were considered to be aimed principally at attorneys' agents who spot frightened persons called to court, and direct them to their employers.

Attaches say that these "runners" or "cappers" are as expert in their line of corralling those in minor legal tangles as sightseeing speilers are in nabbing tourists. They watch for men and women ostensibly nervous and ill at ease—persons who welcome the chance to tell others their troubles. After listening quietly to woeful stories of auto mishaps, early morning mistakes and the like they direct the troubled ones to a lawyer—and collect on a commission basis.

It was pointed out that in most traffic cases the need of a lawyer is unnecessary, because such cases are somewhat informally heard and are often completed within a few minutes. The cost of an attorney's services sometimes is above the heaviest fine that could be imposed had the defendant pled guilty.

Bramhall, in giving the "keep-moving" order, pointed out that general congestion in the corridors was becoming inexcusable. Such conditions will be alleviated when the new court building in Judiciary Square is completed.

D. C. Traffic Chief Refuses New Auto On Unlucky Friday

Acting Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge is superstitious—and he admits it.

Yesterday was Friday the 13th. And yesterday, Eldridge was scheduled to receive delivery of a new automobile. But he glanced at the calendar and cancelled the order.

"I don't believe in starting anything important on Friday the 13th," he said.

The new car will be delivered today.

Tree Deaths Laid To Hidden Spring

Tests on water pipes in the Lafayette Park area yesterday convinced National Capital Parks officials that excessive underground water that has killed two trees and now endangers others is due to a new underground spring somewhere in the vicinity.

"We are satisfied that it is not the water system, but that a spring has broken out," Superintendent C. Marshall Finnan said last night.

Among the most historic springs flowing under Washington are those in Franklin Park, which one time supplied all drinking water for the White House.

Largest Bomber In World Viewed

The largest patrol bomber in the world was exhibited publicly for the first time yesterday in flights over Long Island Sound.

Results of the test flights of the four-motored "flying dreadnaught" were withheld by the Navy Department, but it is understood the cruising speed of the ship is in excess of 200 miles an hour.

The plane, built experimentally for the Navy by the Sikorsky Aircraft Corporation, weighs approximately 54,000 pounds and has a wingspread of 125 feet. It is about 75 feet long. It is scheduled for delivery in the late summer.

Beer 'Nonintoxicating,' Unsteady Driver Freed

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 13 (AP).—William Leifheit, truck driver who contended he could not be convicted of drunken driving because Kansas' 3.2 beer legally is not intoxicating, won acquittal here today.

But Police Judge E. Edward Murray instructed the jurors to consider only whether Leifheit was intoxicated when his transport truck was involved in a highway accident. In his first trial, Leifheit testified he had drunk only 3.2 beer, which was declared non-intoxicating by the last legislature.

Foster-Daughter Missed 'Daddy' Browning Rites

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Miss Marjorie Browning, 22, who is suing for a $1,000,000 share in the estate of her late foster-father, Edward W. (Daddy) Browning, eccentric multi-millionaire realtor, did not attend the funeral of the man who, she claims, promised to make her his heiress, it was contended today in surrogates' court.

The assertion was made by Daniel S. Shirk, attorney for Mrs. Dorothy (Sunshine) Hood, of Dunn, N. C., another adopted daughter of the wealthy real estate man, as evidence the filial relation claimed by Miss Browning never existed.

'Iron Lung' Aids Girl.

Denver, Aug. 13 (AP).—Hospital attendants reported improvement today in the condition of Shirley Krause, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krause, who was placed in an "iron lung" for treatment for infantile paralysis.

Adjournment Brought Closer By Farm Deal

Roosevelt Agrees to Loans in Exchange for Crop Control Precedence.

S. C., construction substituted. The bill goes to the House."

The Sheppard $25,587,456 Army housing bill, already passed by the House. The Army housing measure authorizes some 40 projects in the United States, Hawaii and the Canal Zone. As originally passed by the House, it authorized only $21,460,688 in appropriations.

Through Garner's brisk parliamentary, "Without objection, the amendment is agreed to," and "Without objection the bill is passed," these measures were approved in a twinkling, and the Vice President recognized Senate Leader Barkley.

Barkley in turn yielded to Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who moved to call up his bill to regulate air transportation of passengers and property, under jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

La Follette Protests.

Here La Follette, who had been trying to get recognition, protested. The Wisconsin Progressive said he wasn't objecting particularly to the "rapidity with which things are going on here," but that Senators should know what business is being transacted and be given "an equal opportunity" to be heard. He objected to Barkley "farming out his time to McCarran" after recognition by Garner.

Garner retorted he had recognized Barkley because he was Senate leader and on his feet. He said La Follette was correct in objecting to a Senator "farming out his time." But he said it was "only a question of mathematics," and he could have recognized McCarran directly for the same purpose.

Senate committees meanwhile were not inactive. A special committee investigating crime conditions filed a report recommending general consolidation of Government investigating agencies, now in several departments.

Impasse Broken.

Action of the Senate in agreeing to give right of way to general farm legislation at the start of next session followed a complete impasse on crop control this session, refusal of the President to make crop loans without assurance of control, and a threat by the Agriculture Committee to force mandatory loans.

Yesterday Representative Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, led a delegation of four Senators to the White House in an effort to work out an agreement on loans. With Bilbo went Senators Ellender, of Louisiana; Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Schwellenbach, of Washington, all Democrats.

The upshot was, Bilbo announced later, the President was willing to make cotton crop loans immediately, provide Congress approved the Bilbo resolution pledging crop control action at the start of next session.

12-Cent Loan Subsidy.

Although the size of the cotton loan was not agreed on, Bilbo said, the President consented to a 12-cent-a-pound loan-subsidy combination. If only 10 cents a pound, for example, were loaned on cotton, an additional 2-cent subsidy would be paid later to those farmers who pledged sight-unseen co-operation with next year's crop control program. Bilbo said he thought the Administration would give similar consideration to other crops, such as wheat, corn, and hogs, should they encounter a serious price situation.

The Senate accepted the President's informal offer by adopting the Bilbo resolution in the late afternoon. It made it "the sense of the Congress that a permanent agricultural production control program will be the first legislation to engage the attention of the Congress upon its convening in its next session."

The resolution was so worded that Congress might yet be called back into special session to consider farm measures.

The new crop-loan subsidy arrangemetn agreed to by the President is modeled after the 1935 program, which cost $35,000,000, and which provided 10-cent loans and a 2-cent subsidy. The new loan might be 9 cents, in which event a subsidy of 3 cents would be provided. The President asked Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who sat in on the White House conference, to work out a loan schedule. If the House adopts the Bilbo resolution, the President will make the price-pegging loans without mandatory action by Congress.

Overridden on Sugar Bill.

If the President gained anything from his farm bargain, he was overridden completely on the sugar marketing control bill passed by the Senate yesterday. Mr. Roosevelt had threatened to veto the House sugar bill on ground of "discrimination" against island refiners. He wrote Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee that the so-called Senate "compromise," freezing both domestic and island refining operations, would perpetuate the "discrimination." Wallace warned it would "legalize" a monopoly in sugar refining.

But the Senate yesterday passed the bill over the President's objections, and the measure appeared headed into a certain White House veto. Vainly Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, protested that representatives of his State had not been consulted. His amendment providing a larger quota for Florida was defeated.

Senate Group Approves Black For Court Seat

Sub-committee Overrides Borah and Austin on Legal Question.

his opposition primarily on what he called "legal barriers."

"I believe the effect of the Sumners (Supreme Court retirement) act was to create a new office," said Burke. "Although Van Devaanter (retired) has no right to return to the court, he is still a justice. By indirection, a new office has been created, and no Senator sitting when the act was passed is eligible to the court. On that ground, I will oppose Senator Black's nomination."

Although following in the wake of the court fight, the contest on Black's nomination was not following court plan lines. Senators Wheeler, of Montana, and O'Mahoney, of Wisconsin, and other Democrats prominently identified with court plan opposition, were supporting the Alabaman's appointment.

Austin Pleads For Delay.

Reaction to Black's nomination had not yet reflected itself in senatorial mail, but some said they were beginning to receive a telegraphic response they said was running predominantly against his confirmation.

At yesterday's Senate sub-committee meeting, Austin asked his colleagues to delay action until the legal question of whether Congress under the retirement act had increased court emoluments, could be explored, along with other constitutional issues.

Austin's request for delay was opposed by Senator Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois.

"Unless there is objection as to character or as to legal fitness of the nominee, this sub-committee should not go further into the question," insisted Dieterich. "We should not weaken before the public the men selected for such posts as this—a practice we too often indulge in."

Ashurst Decries Opposition.

After the sub-committee voted approval, Chairman Ashurst decided to let full Judiciary Committee consideration go over until the regular meeting on Monday. He said there was no need for hurry, and it would be "physically impossible" to get the committee together before that time, because of the heavy legislative slate.

He called the constitutional arguments against Black's confirmation "vague and insubstantial, like the stuff that dreams are made on."

Commenting on Black's qualifications, the colorful judiciary chairman added: "Put a saddle on a frisky colt and he soon tames down."

Smith Is Silent.

Senators Neely and Logan predicted "there would not be much opposition to Black" on the final showdown.

Typical of many Southern Senators, Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, declined to say how he would vote.

"Not a word," said Smith. "Wait and see."

Among the court plan opponents not yet taking a public stand was Senator Pat McCarran, energetic Nevada Democrat. McCarran said only that he considered the legal issues raised presented "a very serious question."

Two Seek Senate Seat.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 13 (AP).—At least two candidates definitely had entered the race today for the Senate seat of Hugo Black.

Representative Lister Hill, of Montgomery, announced in Paris he would be a candidate, and State Senator J. Miller Bonner, of Camden, who had said he would oppose Black in the 1938 primaries, reiterated his intention of entering the campaign.

Roe P. Greer, of Sylacauga, said a movement had been launched in that section to have Gov. Bibb Graves appoint Donald Comer, widely known industrialist, as Black's successor for the unexpired term.

The Governor had not commented on whether he would call a special election or make a temporary appointment. Some capitol circles, however, predicted Graves, a supporter of the President, would make an appointment to leave no room for doubt that a New Dealer would get the job.

John D. McQueen, chairman of the Alabama State Democratic committee, said today he was "still considering" offering as a candidate for the Senate.

Pay-Hour Bill Junked by Rules Group in House

by the President, it was conceded, is the only hope of saving the bill.

Yesterday a series of actions confirmed the general House opinion the bill is dead for this session. One of the most significant of these came late when Representative Arthur D. Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the 25-member "Wages-Hours Steering Committee," announced that he would be satisfied to let the bill die now on two conditions.

These conditions were, he said, that a recess-study committee be appointed to survey the entire situation until Congress meets in January, and that "positive assurance" be given that wages-hours legislation would be proposed for enactment early next session.

"I speak only for myself," said Healey. "I do not konw how the rest of our group will go. I am satisfied that we are at a dead-end now, however, due to the strangling of this bill by the Rules Committee, and I intend to suggest this course—the study committee plan—to a meeting of our committee Monday.

"I believe that in this way we would get a stronger bill than that now in the House. Further, passage of the present bill without certain amendments might be disastrous."

Last Favoring Action.

Healey's self-elected committee was the last House pressure group favoring enactment of the wages-hours bill at this session. If this committee, admitting the impasse presented by the Rules Committee's refusal to grant a rule, now withdraws in favor of a stronger bill at the next session, the present measure is dead, observers agree.

Floor Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, House Democratic chieftain, said, however: "This fight won't be over until the last gavel falls on this Congress. We'll keep trying."

Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House Labor Committee, meanwhile, introduced a resolution formally asking the House Rules Committee for a rule on the wages-hours bill.

Mrs. Norton, confessing prospects for the bill are gloomy, told the press this was the first move in the lengthy procedure necessary to discharge the powerful Rules Committee from consideration of the measure.

After the passage of seven legislative days, Mrs. Norton said, the next move will be to present a petition for discharge of the Rules Committee from consideration of the bill.

After the requisite 218 signatures—a majority of the House—have been obtained, the motion to discharge goes on the House calendar. After seven legislative days have then passed, any petition-signer may ask recognition for the purpose of calling up the motion, and the House must then proceed to consideration of the bill. However, this recognition can only be sought on the second and fourth Mondays of a calendar month.

Canon Stokes To Talk on Trip At Communion

International Conference Will Be Theme of Morning Sermon.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes will preach at celebration of the Holy Communion in the Great Choir of Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 11 a. m., taking as his theme "The Most Significent Feature of the World Conference on Church, Community and State at Oxford." He attended this international gathering as one of the associate delegates and read from the pulpit in the Cathedral last Sunday morning the final address issued by the conference to the Christian churches of the world.

The preacher at the people's evensong service at 4 o'clock will be the Rev. Edward Slater Dunlap. Music for both these services will be furnished by a unit of the Cathedral Choir of men and boys, while Robert G. Barrow, organist and choirmaster, is on his vacation.

The Holy Communion will be celebrated in the Chapel of St. Mary at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The committee of clergy and laity, of which the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Cathedral, is chairman, to formulate plans for a great open air service in the Cathedrel amphitheater Sunday afternoon, September 26, in commemoration of the fourteenth anniversary of the consecration of Bishop James E. Freeman, has issued an official report to all parishes, chapels and missions in the Diocese of Washington. The service is being planned as an act of reconsecration for the approximately 16,000 men, women and children who have been confirmed by Bishop Freeman since he was consecrated on the Feast of St. Michael and All Angels, September 29, 1923.

'Gates of Hell' Will Be Subject Of Dr. Smith

Missouri Cleric Is Guest Pastor at National City Christian Church.

Dr. Harvey Baker Smith, who is occupying the pulpit at National City Christian Church in the absence of Dr. Raphael H. Miller, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "Facing the Gates of Hell."

The Business Women's Guild will conduct its monthly meeting at 5:30 p. m. Monday in the Social Hall.

Science Churches To Have 'Soul' Text

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 42:2: "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God?"

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in His temple."

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Beauty is the thing of life, which dwells forever in the eternal Mind and reflects the charms of His goodness in expression, form, outline and color."

Crew Rescued By Fishermen After Attack

25 Shells Dropped From Air; Strife Reported in Franco Ranks.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Aug. 13.—A communique tonight reported four insurgent airplanes bombed and sank the Danish vessel Edith in the Mediterranean 30 miles south of here.

It said the ship's crew of 20 and a French nonintervention control observer were saved through the assistance of two fishing boats from Villanueva y Geltru.

Twenty-five bombs were dropped in the attack which the communique said took place last night. The Edith was listed as a vessel of 1,931 tons.

Sinking Confirmed.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug. 13 (AP).—Officials of the J. Lauritzen Steamship Co., owners of the Edith, confirmed tonight that the vessel had been sunk in the Mediterranean in an airplane attack.

They said she was the company's twentieth vessel captured or bombed by Spanish insurgents. The Edith was en route from Marseille, France, to Barcelona with a cargo of meat.

Officials said she was attacked despite the fact she was flying a nonintervention flag and had a control officer aboard.

Lost Battalion Gives Up.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Large detachments of a "lost battalion" of loyalist troops trapped in the Sierra Carbonera surrendered today to nationalists and reported their comrades were close to starvation on a meager diet of rice and lentils.

An encircling movement by insurgents cut off hundreds of government soldiers on the sierra. Six thousand more were similarly trapped on Sierra Jabalon and reported to be in as dire straits.

Intense heat paralyzed large-scale activity on the Teruel-Aragon front today.

Valencia, Spain, Aug. 13 (AP).—The defense ministry tonight reported new and more widespread internal trouble among the insurgents in Spain's civil war. It said there had been numerous executions and arrests in Spanish Morocco and "grave incidents" in San Sebastian, north Spanish city near the Franco-Spanish border.

Japanese Flagship Bombed by Chinese

Hysterical refugees swarmed into the International Settlement to escape the guns of both Chinese and Japanese.

Parts of Shanghai were in flames and Japanese and Chinese forces were locked in a bitter battle over more than 100 square miles of territory.

The situation in Shanghai, where more than 4,000 Americans and a number of United States war vessels were endangered, overshadowed developments in North China, where Japanese soldiers poured into the southern entrance of strategic Nankow Pass, meeting little opposition from Chinese Central Government troops.

Firing from Chinese positions there suddenly decreased, and the Japanese moved into the entrance of the pass which leads into mountainous regions of northwest China.

Guns Rake Walls of Pass.

The Japanese entered the pass only for a short distance. They were protected by a continuous curtain of machine-gun fire. A dozen howitzers and smaller artillery raked the faces of the mountains flanking the pass.

The Chinese appeared to be gradually pushed back before the superior gun-power of the Japanese.

Fighting raged on four fronts and American interests were affected on all of them.

Chinese Gain in North.

South of Peiping, on the Peiping-Hankow Railway, the Japanese indicated they might open a drive against more than 100,000 Chinese soldiers scattered around Paotingfu, north of the Yellow River. But the Chinese continued to show slight advances on this front.

Along the Tientsin-Nanking Railway, south of Tientsin, the Japanese also threatened a major drive, but the Chinese continued on the offensive in an effort to divert Japanese regiments from the vital Peiping-Suiyuan Railway zone.

Japanese ripped huge areas of the native city of Shanghai to pieces with their big guns today in a battle which had been raging for more than 15 hours.

A dozen American families, including 10 in the region of the Kiangwan race course outside the city, were missing. It was believed, however, they had escaped and would be found among hundreds of thousands of refugees jamming this huge port city's international concession.

The U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of the U. S. Asiatic squadron, arrived in port this morning from Tsingtao and the north with more than 900 men to aid 1,050 U. S. Marines and American volunteer companies in protecting Americans and their property.

Artillery Duel Rages.

A violent artillery duel between Chinese and Japanese forces, which had continued intermittently for hours, still was under way as dawn approached. Smoke obscured much of the fighting zone.

United States sailors, armed for shore duty, were landed from the station ship Sacramento and took up guard posts around the American-owned Shanghai Power Co., on the west bank of the Whangpoo River. Other units of the Asiatic fleets were protecting Americans at other towns along the river.

The whole sky to the north of Shanghai was aglow from flaming buildings in he direction of Chapei and Kiangwan.

New Loan for China.

Berlin, August 13 (AP).—China's financial position has been strengthened, it was reported in financial circles today, through a loan negotiated by her finance minister, Dr. H. H. Kung, with a group of Swiss and Netherlands banks. Dr. Kung had left Berlin for Praha, capital of Czechoslovakia, and the loan reports could not be confirmed. Previously Chinese officials announced he had reached "agreements in principle" to float Chinese government loans in Great Britain and France.

Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., Explains Elusiveness

Paris, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., explained in the Austrian Tyrol tonight why he and his bride, the former Ethel duPont, so persistently fled from newspapermen on their honeymoon.

"We had a good time fooling you," he told reporters after he had rejoined his grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, at Eigen, near Salzburg. "Not because we want to annoy reporters, among whom we have many friends, but because of the proverb which exists in all languages and dialects:

"'In order to live happily it is best to live hidden.'"

Beer Really Responsible for Comforts of Air Conditioning; Alexandria, Va., Brewer Took Out Patent on Idea Back in 1880

Intended for Artificial Ice but Same Principle Is Used Today.

The old Portner Brewery, in Alexandria, where millions of gallons of beer were bottled from Civil War days onward, and where Robert Portner installed the first air-conditioning system on record to perfect his brew. The insert shows Portner in his hey-day.

When the mercury climbed and kept on climbing back in 1880, Robert Portner did not just sit around and talk about it—or go swimming, as Washingtonians of today have the inclination to do. He went to work and did something.

He was the first man in the United States to do anything about the weather, it appears from records in the Patent Office. He started air-conditioning.

Now Mr. Portner, who was an Alexandria, Va., brewer, a Washington apartment house builder, and businessman extraordinary, did not have your special comfort in mind when he took out Patent 229750, dated July 6, 1880.

Had Business In Mind.

He was thinking business, and his main business at the time was beer making. He was more interested in pure air than in the cool air that makes summer movie-going a pleasure. Pure air, he said, "is a matter of prime importance to the attainment of a good fermentation and the production of pure, fine beer."

Nevertheless, he was responsible for the air-conditioning comforts modern America is just now beginning to enjoy.

His invention, which was patented jointly with B. E. J. Eils, of Washington, created quite a commotion, and visitors from many States came to Alexandria to see it work. They were much more interested in the artificial ice that it made than they were in the air-conditioning feature. Mr. Portner himself doubtless would have agreed with them that no one would ever find it necessary to air-condition a restaurant. Artificial ice, however, they could see and were ready for. The Portner ice machine was the first one with a direct ammonia expansion.

Mrs. Henry Flood, one of the inventor's daughters, recalled last night that her father spent more than ten years on the artificial refrigeration invention. She said he went to Europe to recuperate for two years and his patents were "stolen while he was away."

Sold Out for $50,000.

"There were numerous lawsuits and finally my father sold his claims for around $50,000. The outcome was always one of the big disappointments of his life."

Because of Mr. Portner's efforts in inventing the air-cooling machine and using it successfully in his Alexandria brewery, the United Brewers Industrial Foundation is able to scoff at the idea that air-conditioning is an industrial innovation. "Breweries, which have to be the cleanest industrial plants in the world, have been using it for more than a half century," they declare.

Some of the buildings used by Mr. Portner at Alexandria are still standing, although the main brewery has been torn away, Mrs. Flood said.

Mr. Portner was born in Germany and attended school at Annaburg, which name he later gave to his 2,500-acre estate in Virginia. He came to Alexandria in 1861 and started a small grocery business, which was extended to include a brewery—so that beer requests of Northern soldiers quartered in the town could be met. The end of the war, with subsequent demobilization of the large army camp, nearly bankrupted his brewing venture.

Extended His Market.

He extended his market into Pittsburgh and Washington, however, and the brewery continued to flourish until enactment of national prohibition. Before his death in the early 1900s he had expanded his interests into many fields. He started three building and loan associations in Alexandria, originated the Alexandria shipyards. He was a stockholder and director for numerous Washington banks and business enterprises, including the Virginia Midland Railway. He was president of the Capital Construction Co. and president of the United States Brewers Association.

Far East Evidenc Proves Aggression Of Japanese, The Post's Observer Says

Minor skirmishes followed. At length, the Japanese expressed willingness to settle the controversy on the following terms:

1. Evacuation of Chinese troops from the vicinity of Marco Polo Bridge, where the original hostilities had occurred.

2. Official Chinese apology and punishment of officials responsible for the incident.

3. Suppression, in co-operation with the Japanese, of all anti-Japanese bodies, including the Communists and the "Blue Shirts," a patriotic organization said to be guided by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

The Chinese leaders in Tientsin and Peiping on the night of July 11 accepted the Japanese terms.

But peace was not to be. A few hours earlier, meeting in an emergency conference in Tokyo, the Japanese cabinet decided to regard the minor incident in North China as a sufficient cause for forcing a "showdown" in the area and to dispatch troops to Tientsin to support the Japanese bid for a thorough reorganization of the northern political, administrative and military setup.

Situation Clear.

Tokyo's action made it clear to the Chinese leaders in Nanking and Peiping that Japan was ready to go to any extent to enforce her will.

Adding insult to a threat, S. Hidaka, Japanese charge d'affaires in Nanking, warned the Central government on July 11 and 12 not to interfere with any agreement that may be reached between the Chinese authorities in North China and the Japanese army.

Put bluntly, this warning was equivalent to a demand that the Chinese government sanction the actions of officials who secured and held their posts at the sufferance of the Japanese army and who were notoriously corrupt.

The signing of the accord in Peiping did not stop fighting. Daily clashes occurred between July 13 and 19. Meanwhile, Japanese troops were pouring into northern Hopei and the Chinese government's army was slowly moving north.

While continuing to profess its peaceful intentions to China and to the outside world, the Japanese government on July 11 decided to designate the developments in North China as an "incident." This terminological quibble enabled the government to draw all necessary funds from the treasury for the dispatch of troops to the war zone.

Communities Recalled.

Simultaneously, Tokyo ordered Japanese communities in the interior of China to withdraw to Peiping and Tientsin.

That Japan was determined to force a "show-down" and was actively preparing the ground for her subsequent actions was further underscored by the ultimatum, presented to the Nanking government on July 17.

The ultimatum, a reply to which was asked within 48 hours, urged the immediate cessation of "provocative activities" as well as the discontinuance of "interference" with the execution by the local authorities of their agreements with the Japanese army.

"The Japanese government," the note said bluntly, "deeply deplores such a threat to the stability of North China, and fears that, if the situation is allowed to develop in the present channels, it may lead to grave and unfathomable consequences."

In its formal reply, the Nanking government proposes that a definite date be fixed for the simultaneous cessation of military movements and the withdrawal of troops on both sides. It also expressed its readiness to enter into negotiations immediately with the Japanese government through regular diplomatic channels. No agreements concluded by local Chinese authorities with the Japanese army would be regarded as valid without the Central Government's approval, it was emphasized.

Reached Limit.

China's reply to Tokyo's ultimatum was supplied by her "strong man," Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, who, on July 19, declared that China had reached the "limit of endurance" and that "there is only one thing to do, and that is to throw the last ounce of energy of our nation into the struggle for national existence."

Col. Sanji Ohkido the same night informed Japan that "decisive measures" should be used to settle the crisis in North China.

The Japanese government, he added, "should not be deceived by the wily tactics pursued by the Nanking government."

Probably realizing the effect of such irresponsible outspokenness upon public opinion here and abroad, the Japanese suppressed publication of the statement everywhere but in Japan, where it received wide circulation.

A few hours before Gen. Chiang's declaration, i. e., before Japan had received a reply to her ultimatum, the Japanese garrison in North China announced that "unless the Chinese troops immediately cease their illegal actions," the army will be obliged to take "independent steps" at noon, July 20.

Sign New Agreement.

Sufficiently impressed by the garrison's stand, the Chinese military leaders in Peiping on July 19 signed a new agreement "implementing" that of July 11. The new accord provided, among other points, for:

1. The evacuation of Chinese troops from Peiping and the neighboring areas, including the scene of the original clash.

2. Expulsion of officials whose activities hinder friendly relations between Japan and China.

3. Complete suppression of the anti-Japanese movement, groups and education.

4. Complete suppression of Communist activities in North China.

But clashes, growing in intensity proportionately to the increase in Japanese military strength in North China, continued to occur daily.

Certain of its ability to force an unqualified acceptance of its demands, the Japanese army on July 28 demanded the immediate withdrawal of Chinese troops from Peiping and the neighboring area within 48 hours, on fear of reprisals.

Twelve hours before the expiration of the deadline, the Japanese curtly informed the Chinese authorities that they failed to see any signs of sincerity in Chinese actions and were, therefore, taking "independent action."

Two Columns Move.

Two Japanese columns, one comprising a full-strength division and the other a brigade, simultaneously received marching orders. Early on the morning of July 28, aided by 60 bombers, the Japanese forces attacked the Chinese barracks at Nanyuan, 6 miles south of Peiping.

The Chinese casualties were conservatively put at 5,000, and the entire Twenty-ninth Army was shortly aftreward put to rout.

But the Japanese did not remain content with their victories in Peiping and Tientsin. Japanese aircraft flew to Paotingfu, the provincial capital, 80 miles from Peiping, and bombed Chinese troop trains.

"Peace Corps" Formed.

Meanwhile, in both Tientsin and Peiping so-called peace maintenance commissions were brought into existence under the direct supervision of the Japanese army.

While comparative peace reigns today in the area controlled by the Japanese army, there appears to be little doubt that this is a lull.

Reinforcements are continuing to be rushed to North China, the Diet is preparing to appropriate an additional $80,000,000 for new hostilities, and dark clouds are gathering over Chahar and Shantung, both of which are covered by the Japanese army.

With its appetite whetted by its easy victories, the army will scarcely now rest upon its laurels. The vast superiority exhibited by the Japanese military machine in its engagements with the Chinese army, the lack of unity in Chinese ranks, the stand taken by Washington, Moscow and London, assure the army that time is ripe for "der tag."

It seems likely that within the next three months the Japanese army's bayonets, starting with Chahar and Shantung, will recarve the political map of the Orient beyond recognition.

East Hopei Head Believed Dying in Japanese Prison

Peiping, Aug. 13.—Yin Ju-keng, chief executive of the East Hopei autonomous anti-Communist government, created in 1935 by the Japanese Kwantung army, was reported today to be languishing, or dead, in a Japanese military prison in North China.

His arrest by the Japanese army was effected as he reached Peiping at the head of his peace preservation corps, after attacking the Japanese garrison in Tungchow and massacring the town's Japanese and Korean civilian population.

Retreating after the arrival of Japanese reinforcements and believing that Peiping was still in Chinese hands, Yin sought entry into the ancient capital. He and his army were rounded up and he was rushed to prison.

Britain's 'Grand Old Man' of Sea Is Dead at 90

Baron Runciman, Father of Diplomat, Headed Many Shipping Lines.

By the Associated Press.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, Aug. 13.—Baron Runciman, who began a distinguished career of following the sea by running away from home 78 years ago to become a cabin boy, died to day at the age of 90, the "grand old man" of British shipping.

He was father of Walter Runciman, who was made a viscount several weeks ago on retiement after serving in several Conservative cabinets.

Baron Runciman's first ship took him on a voyage to the South Seas. After that he followed the sea as sailor and ship's officer for a quarter-century, getting his mate's certificate at 20 and his first command at 24.

He founded his first shipping line, the Moor Line, nearly 65 years ago, and his interests expanded until they included some of the finest ships afloat. He was the head of Walter Runciman & Co., chairman of the Anchor Line and director of many steamship companies.

He was firm against superliners and rivalry for "blue ribands." Speaking of the decision to build a sister ship for the Queen Mary, he said: "If the Queen Mary were divided into three the owners would have 50 times more profit."

Baron Runciman missed by only a day his wish to die at sea. He had been convalescing aboard his yacht Sunbeam II from an illness suffered in the spring.

'Apricots' Prove Arms for Kurds

Beirut, Syria, Aug. 13 (AP).—French inspectors, digging into an innocent looking case of apricots at the Aleppo Railway station today uncovered a shipment of munitions for rebellious Kurdish tribesmen.

The shipment was adrdessed to Amouda, one of the centers of the month-old violence that has sent French airplanes and infantry into northeastern Syria to clean up agitators for Kurdish autonomy.

French officials, who threw a heavy guard around the station, said the shipment came from the interior. Christians were ordered evacuated from several troubled villages to prevent further Moslem raids.

Hull Shelves Plan to Lease Six Destroyers

Decides on Delay After Talk With Argentine Ambassador.

By William V. Nesly.

The Administration proposal to lease six decommissioned destroyers to Brazil, while offering similar ships to other South American countries at the same time, will not be pressed for passage at this session of Congress, it became clear yesterday.

Ambassador Felipe A. Espil, of Argentina, where opposition to the plan has been most pronounced, called on Secretary of State Hull early in the day and conveyed his Government's request for more time in which to consider all aspects and possible effects of the suggestion. Secretary Hull said he readily assented.

Asked at his press conference whether he would ask the Senate to delay action on the resolution authorizing the President to execute the leases, Hull replied that the matter already was in abeyance at the Capitol, but he would be glad to acquaint Congressional leaders with Argentina's expression. The Walsh resolution, introduced at the request of the President and the State Department, is in the Foreign Relations Committee, where it was sent last Saturday.

Exchange Views.

To the suggestion that the new development meant no action would be taken at this session, Hull replied that he didn't know how long the session would last, but emphasized that he had no intention to call for haste.

He said he and Ambassador Espil had had a neighborly and friendly exchange of views on the leasing plan and that he had reassured the Ambassador it was the disposition and policy of this Governme to encourage the fullest and freest discussion and consideration on this or other matters in which the South American countries might be interested.

The suggestion arose that Argentina intends to propose a more general consultation of South American powers on the destroyer idea by Secretary Hull declined to discuss that possibility.

Reiterating his stand that there is nothing mysterious about the lease undertaking and that it is not tied up with any other international situation whatever, the Secretary said the matter had been under consideration for a year and that there had never been any inclination to limit discussion of it. It was only intended as another expression of this country's "good neighbor" policy, he reiterated, and was agreed to with the realization that if the United State did not cooperate with the Latin-Americans other powers would do so.

Argentina Protests.

Chief opposition to the leasing has come from Argentina and Germany. Argentina, with a substantial navy of her own apparently loathe to see the relative strength of South American natives upset, but the State Department has replied to this with insistence the leased destroyers could not become a part of the lessee's navy, but would be subject to recapture by this country at any time. The craft would be loaned only for training purposes, it is contended, and could not be used for combat or in any matter that would violate any of the international obligations of this country.

Germans, on the other hand, see another threat to their recently growing trade with the South American country in such a close relationship between the United States and Brazil. The monetary and trade agreements reached between the United States and Brazil several weeks ago also interpreted as aimed at combatting alleged subsidization by Berlin of her commerce with Brazil.

Criticism of reported designs on South American countries by "Fascist, over-industrialized" nations of Europe also has marked the heated debate in South American papers over the proposal.

Sinking of Land May Swallow Up Stream in Idaho

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 13 (AP).—Buhl's "sinking canyon," steadily devouring a rich farming section, threatened tonight to change a life-giving irrigation stream into another of Idaho's many lost rivers.

As the canyon moved toward the bed of the important Salmon River one geologist expressed a belief that irrigation—chiefly responsible for agricultural development in this region—paradoxically may have hastened the advance of destruction by softening the earth.

Horton Abell, Idaho geologist who is studying the collapse of a half dozen fertile farm acres, and the subsequent formation of a rugged, deep canyon, said the sinking process is slowly blocking the salmon.

Security Asked For Americans In Holy Land

Notes Seek Assurance of Britain in Any Shift in Mandate.

By the Associated Press

Secretary of State Hull disclosed yesterday the United States had demanded assurance from Great Britain that rights of this Government and its nationals in Palestine will be protected under any changes in the Palestine mandate.

Hull made public diplomatic exchanges in which the United States enunciated its "safeguard" requirements. The notes followed a British proposal to partition Palestine into Jewish, Arab, and mandated States.

Britain assured the United States it would keep this Government "fully informed."

Britain to Consult United States.

The foreign office informed Robert W. Bingham, American ambassador to the Court of St. James, that this Government would be consulted and its assent sought on any changes in the mandate affecting American rights.

Britain said it intended to propose changes recommended by its royal commission of inquiry to the League of Nations Council next month.

Rights Established In 1924.

American rights in Palestine were established in an American-British convention of December, 1924. This compact secured to the United States all rights and benefits enjoyed by League members and their nationals.

The convention further secured American property rights, religious and educational freedom for American nationals, and applied to Palestine the same extradition procedure as between Britain and the United States.

The convention provided that no change affecting the American-British convention could be made in the mandate without United States consent.

U. S. Demands to Be Met.

London, Aug. 13 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden assured Robert Worth Bingham, United States Ambassador, tonight Britain would seek consent of the United States if any change in the Palestine mandate is made which affects United States rights under the Anglo-American convention of 1924.

A white paper publication of their correspondence on the subject revealed that Bingham, in a letter to Eden, made it clear that the United States' action in refraining from insisting upon fulfillment of its rights in the case of Iraq was not to be construed as abandonment of the principle established.

Hanfstaengl Sent On Long 'Vacation'

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP).—Prof. Eberhard Hanfstaengl, director of the Berlin National Gallery, who, it was rumored, was a bit lukewarm toward the new Nazi purge of art, was sent on an "indefinite vacation" today.

Officers Seize Paraguay Rule Without a Shot

Bloodless Coup Deposes Cabinet; Franco to Stay as President.

By the United Press.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 13.—A bloodless coup d'etat, engineered by Army and Navy officers, today placed the government of Paraguay in control of the military and forced the resignation of the cabinet.

A proclamation signed by Lieut. Col. Ramon Paredes in the name of the armed forces said Provisional President Col. Rafael Franco would continue in office. Franco, who assumed the presidency after the revolt of February 17, 1936, which overthrew the Liberal regime of Dr. Eusebio Ayala, immediately began conversations with the heads of the uprising to form a new government.

The movement was supported by all military garrisons throughout the country. It was carried out without firing a shot, the leaders taking personal charge of the asuncion garrison and posting their forces at strategic positions in the city. Troops were concentrated at the military college which faces Government House, while the air force was kept in readiness at the aviation school in Campo Grande, 6 miles outside the city.

The entire city was quiet.

Paredes' proclamation assured the people there would be no bloodshed and pledged the Army and Navy not to hand over the government to any political group.

Toward Crisis At Shanghai.

The war clouds now settling over Shanghai are for two reasons of a much more serious character than those which have precipitated hostilities in the Peiping-Tientsin area. And to say that is not to belittle the magnitude of the problem aroused by current Japanese aggressions in northern China.

At Shanghai, in the first place, a Japanese thrust would be directed against the heart of the Nanking government.

In contradistinction to the situation in the north, the control of Chiang Kai-shek at this huge port is well established. From this vital industrial and commercial center much of the revenue of Nanking is derived. Whereas passage of control of Peiping to Japan would not affect the central Chinese government seriously, except as a matter of prestige, the loss of Shanghai would be almost fatal.

Consequently, Chiang must fight if Shanghai is attacked. If this undeclared war is confined to the north he can keep his own well-trained troops at home, letting local commanders resist the Japanese. But to defend Shanghai he must throw his crack regiments against the enemy, and it is to be expected that he will do so.

In the second place, the chances of serious injury to foreign interests resulting from hostilities are far greater at Shanghai than in the northern cities.

This is not merely because the foreign investment at Shanghai is enormous, but also because the Chinese cannot properly be expected to respect the feelings of Americans and other aliens in the event of another unprovoked invasion there. In the 1932 fighting the Chinese troops made no attempt to occupy the concession areas at Shanghai, showing a scrupulous regard for treaty obligations of which the Japanese took prompt military advantage. If Chiang Kai-shek should be equally punctilious in his diplomatic attitude this time he would, from the military viewpoint, be committing an act of supreme folly.

Partly because of the glaring deficiencies of our neutrality act, which, of course, must be invoked if we admit the existence of war in China, our official attitude so far is that all is peaceful in the Far East. Such blinking of the facts will soon cease to be possible if, as current events indicate, Shanghai is again to become a large-scale battle zone.

Sitting On The Lid.

Refusal of the House Rules Committee to investigate the sale of Democratic National Convention books is the more unfortunate because it coincides with unsavory rumors of a more far-reaching character and considerable evidence suggesting that the corrupt practices act has been taken none too seriously by the Administration. Chairman O'Connor seemed to sense the impropriety of the committee's stand when he evasively reported that "no action" had been taken.

Scandals are often grossly inflated when attempts are made to deny any connection between smoke and fire. No committee can successfully sit on the lid of a pot boiling with rumors, charges and alleged evidence of racketeering. The odium which attaches to a policy of refusing to act against alleged violators simply because the party in power has the votes to protect them should be sufficient, soon or late, to bring a reversal of the committee's stand.

Some of the evidence presented by Representative Snell appears to be well sustained. Certainly it is sufficient basis for a Congressional inquiry in which the whole truth could be brought out. Indeed the Administration should itself demand an inquiry to prevent the implications of scandal from reaching those whose integrity may be most unjustly impugned.

A Blow To Morale.

Much has been said in these columns about taxing the public to build $6,000 homes for families of low income. But no editorial has emphasized the point so sharply as does a letter to the editor published on this page yesterday.

By dint of hard work and careful saving, Mr. C. A. Doerr, writer of the letter in question, has become the owner of a lot and is in a position to build a $2,500 house on it. That undertaking seems to be clouded, however, by the attitude of his daughter described as "almost a young lady." Since her friends are planning to live in $6,000 PWA houses, partly at public expense, she fears that she may become a social outcast by living in a $2,500 house provided by the frugality of her father.

That seemingly trivial complaint strikes a powerful blow at the housing policy pursued by the Government during the last few years. Tax funds have been used to build for a few fortunate families better houses than the average citizen can afford to build for himself. "My trouble," writes Mr. Doerr, "is that my income is too high to permit me to occupy a $6,000 Government house and too low to enable me to live in one of my own costing more than $2,500." No wonder he is perturbed.

Extravagant outlays for falsely designated low-cost housing to date fully explain the drastic cost limitations imposed by the Senate upon projects that may be authorized under the Wagner bill. It is utterly unreasonable for the Government to offer housing frills to a few chosen families when the need for replacement of slums by decent dwellings of minimum cost is so great.

As this letter indicates, however, far more than waste of money is at stake. The policy of providing luxuries for some families at the expense of taxpayers strikes a cruel blow at the morale of frugal bread-winners everywhere.

The Case For Adjournment.

When the long battle over the Supreme Court ended, speedy adjournment of Congress would have seemed in order from every objective viewpoint.

There was no pressing emergency necessitating a prolonged sitting to pass remedial legislation. With tempers frayed and physical resistance lowered by months of tedious committee work and acrimonious debate, the Legislature was in no mood to deal objectively with the complicated Administration measures listed as unfinished business. But, perhaps because he did not wish the session to terminate on a note of defeat, the President decided to apply pressure to a weary and demoralized following in behalf of an ambitious legislative program.

There was a time when such tactics would have been successful. A docile majority would have responded meekly to the voice of command and plunged blindly toward an obscure goal. Today, however, a different spirit prevails. A good many Congressmen have become restive under restraint and not at all inclined to submit to whip and spur. In the Senate, particularly, the post of the new majority leader is proving anything but a sinecure.

Opposition to the Administration's forcing methods, moreover, is likely to assume a mischievous rather than a constructive turn. Instead of taking a firm stand against hasty action on complicated measures which are imperfectly understood, members of Congress are taking advantage of the confusion to push their own pet projects. As a result, a bad legislative snarl has been created.

The wages-and-hours bill, the housing bill and the sugar bill are all in a very unsatisfactory condition. Time is also needed to achieve any constructive results from the reorganization legislation. In this case, the House and Senate cannot even agree on the method of procedure, the House having decided upon four separate bills and the Senate preferring an omnibus measure. Another Administration bill—to block tax evasion—has just been reported out by the Ways and Means Committee.

To the delays caused by the need for closer study and extended debate, there have now been added complications resulting from legislative stratagems. The House wages-and-hours bill is still held up by the Rules Committee, and apparently Southern opposition to the bill, both in House and Senate, has not been placated by Administration promises to make cotton loans. Now it seems that this concession was made on the strength of pledges for later crop-control legislation to offset any immediate loans.

None of the major measures on the President's program has to be passed at this session. Action on most, if not all, of them ought to be postponed until the far-reaching social and economic implications are better understood.

It is, of course, possible that vote-trading procedure would quickly bring order out of the seeming legislative chaos. But there is little to be said in behalf of laws passed in that manner. When the Senate acts on the President's nomination for the Supreme Court, any sting remaining from his earlier defeat should be assuaged. Then there will not be even a psychological argument for holding Congress in session longer.

Bungling With Trees.

Ask nurserymen why the big beech and one of the magnificent magnolias in Lafayette Square are dying. At first, probably not having inspected the trees closely, they'll theorize. They'll suggest that perhaps the trees were moved and have never recovered from the unnatural treatment. They'll say that the scale attacking poplars in this region may now be moving to the beeches.

But tell them (as is the case) that a foot or more of earth not long ago was graded over the base of the trees and they'll end their theorizing. The main feeding roots which spread out from the trunk of a tree run naturally only a few inches under the surface of the ground. Cover them deeper and they suffocate, killing the tree.

More than a year ago squads of WPA workers advanced on Lafayette Square with tractors and concrete mixers. The city, appreciating that a little gardening was in order, was surprised at the heavy caliber of their equipment. Soon surprise turned to consternation. Not renovation but complete butchery of one of Washington's loveliest downtown parks had been ordered. Lafayette Square was made an experimental area for the even larger destruction which our civic planners were soon to recommend for the Tidal Basin.

Then winter descended and for long weeks only Jackson held the field, doffing his cap amidst trenches strongly reminiscent of his most famous battle. Meantime, park officials were reassuring outraged citizens that soon their park would be restored to them. Ultimately it was, but with every trace of its former pleasant informality gone. More than that, it now is clear that some of the remaining trees have been killed in the enthusiasm for concreted symmetry.

With Gov. Martin Davey available to the New Deal, it does seem unnecessary for trees directly in front of the White House to be sacrificed to bungling "rehabilitation" programs.

Confirmation Problems.

Whatever the public reaction to the nomination of Senator Black for the Supreme Court, the President is to be congratulated for not delaying the appointment until after Congress adjourns. Posts of such importance should not be allowed to remain unfilled for long periods. And a recess appointment, in spite of Attorney General Cummings' opinion, would certainly have created bitterness.

In response to the President's attitude the Senate may be expected to consider the nomination without delay. A number of questions should be cleared up by the Judiciary Committee, but this need not interfere with prompt action in the Senate. That body should take no more time than is necessary to satisfy itself as to Mr. Black's suitability, or lack of it, for this high post.

It is undeniable that the Sumners act has left a muddled situation. Senator Borah and others who believe that no vacancy exists will obviously find it extremely difficult to vote for confirmation of any nominee. But the majority will probably hold to the view of Senators George and Logan, that Congress made possible an increase in the membership of the court by passing the retirement act.

Since there is no question as to the intent of Congress to make way for a new justice when any member of the court should retire from active service, this confusion should not interfere with definitive action on Senator Black. Nevertheless, the ambiguity of the statute should certainly be cleared up. As Senator Burke points out, Congress ought to know whether it technically increased the membership of the Supreme Court in the midst of an apparently successful fight to prevent such action.

A more serious question is whether or not the emoluments of a justiceship were increased by the retirement act. Webster defines "emoluments" as profit from office, employment or labor. If the profit from this particular office has been enhanced during the present session, Senator Black is ineligible, under the Constitution, to fill it.

Before the retirement act was passed resigning justices had no assurance that their salaries would be continued. Congress might grant or withhold that privilege. Now justices may retain various privileges as members of the court, including their salaries, and retire from active duty after serving ten years and passing the age of 70. That seems to be a definite gain for them. Indeed, the basic purpose of the measure was to make retirement from the bench more attractive and thus induce aged members to relinquish active service.

It is difficult, therefore, to assume that the added benefits granted justices by the retirement act are inconsequential. Nor is it at all captious for Senators to raise this point. Under a government of laws, technicalities cannot be lightly discarded to suit the convenience of those in power. Despite the casual attitude of its sub-committee, the Judiciary Committee has a real obligation to deliberate upon these points, along with the extent to which Senator Black has demonstrated qualification for the seat to which the President has named him.

The Five Little Quints.

"They shall not peep" is the latest edict to be issued from the Dionne camp by Dr. Dafoe. It refers to his ban against quintgazing by sightseers who have been privileged to observe, and yet be unobserved by, the famous sisters. The doctor feels that his little charges know that they are being watched, with the result that they have become nervous and irritable and a potential prey to germs.

In this decision Dr. Dafoe shows his customary good judgment and proves again that the children's welfare is his only interest. The Callander Chamber of Commerce may object. The public may feel that this is a harsh ruling. But what price publicity if it stirs up tempers and temperament among Annette, Cecile, Yvonne, Marie and Emilie?

This little Dionne had a runny nose,
That little Dionne had none;
This little Dionne had stage-fright,
That little Dionne had fun.
When the public left them alone.

Dividends.

From the Muskogee (Okla.) Phoenix.

There is a good chuckle in the story of the Chattanooga storekeeper who put up an empty cigar box in his store under a sign reading:

"Police got my slot machine; please put your money here." The chuckle comes from the fact that his patrons took him at his word, so that in a few days the box was nearly full of coins.

The average American likes a joke, and isn't above tossing away a nickel, if it appeals to his sense of humor. The point, however, is that the customers who "played" this cigar box got just about as much for their money as they would have got if the slot machine had never been removed.

The average slot machine is an everything-goes-in, nothing-comes-out proposition. You might just about as well put your money in an empty cigar box, for all you are likely to get out of it. Indeed, these Chattanooga players are probably ahead of the game; they at least got a chuckle for their money.

Benning View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, the people of Benning, are wondering what next our Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, is going to pull out of his grab bag to keep the Adolph Gobel Provision Co. from rebuilding their plant in this vicinity.

Mr. Ickes is so worried because he believes that if the plant is put in operation it would be a burden on the Washington taxpayers. I wonder if Mr. Ickes ever takes the time to realize that the packing firm will employ 266 or more men and women?

It does seem such a shame that he is worrying his poor head about the taxpayers. I wonder if he doesn't know that we taxpayers are paying for his gorgeous suite of rooms, his private kitchen, shower bath and dining room. Those things he could do without, but of course the taxpayers are so generous and kind to Mr. Ickes he repays the people in Benning by doing his utmost to keep something away from here that 95 per cent of the people in this community want and—believe me—want badly.

Veteran's Hope.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is now practically 20 years ago that I was disabled during the World War. During these past years the Government has been giving me a small compensation on account of my disability. The Veterans' Administration has been examining me at intervals during all these years, raising or lowering my compensation after each examination, never giving me the same rating twice.

Won't Congress please before going home pass a bill that will make permanent temporary service-connected ratings, and thereby give the disabled veteran the right to enjoy peace of mind after 20 years of continual examinations. The disabled veteran in most cases has only a few more years to live and his Government should not subject him to continual physical examinations and their resultant uncertainty until his day of death.

Boy Scouts' Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a meeting of the Tall Corn Council of the Boy Scouts of America, located in Des Moines, Iowa, the officers went on record as wishing to thank the citizenry of Washington, D. C., for their unusual and outstanding hospitality shown to Boy Scouts of the United States and many foreign countries during the national Boy Scout Jamboree.

The Tall Corn Council had 60 delegates at this Jamboree, and every one of them feels that great appreciation to the people of Washington should be shown for the many courtesies and outstanding spirit of helpfulness shown by them.

We would appreciate it very much if this expression of appreciation might be given through The Post.

Loan China Destroyers?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking about "leasing" our war vessels to foreign countries, why not lease some warships to China and "lend" her the crews so they can rub out the war-mad Japanese? Nothing would please the American people more. Actually, the Japs are just so many windbags who strut around while they are dealing with the poor Chinese. Put them against the U. S. Navy and one American battleship can lick three Jap battleships any day in the week.

But there will come a time when they are going to get it exactly where the chicken got the ax, and it looks to me like Russia will be the nation to put the kibosh on them. Let's help by "lending" them some ships. EUGENE HUDGINS.

Federal Anti-Lynching Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see where the anti-lynching bill is up for action in the Senate. That is something that we should have had ages ago. It will be interesting to see what will happen from the solid opposition of the Southern gentlemen to this measure.

Of course the South would not be for a bill of this kind. It would make their fun too expensive. They must have their fun, but do not care to pay through the nose for it. As things are now they can torture and lynch on the slightest pretext, knowing full well that they will be safe from penalties of any kind. A stiff fine imposed upon the county will at least make them think twice.

It is sad to relate that the only way to stop guesswork murder—and that is what lynching usually is—is to make the price steep, but after all even such a measure as this one is better than nothing. Let the Southerners oppose this bill for all they are worth. It will only put them on record for all the world to see and condemn.

I note, too, that one of my favorites, Mr. Borah, has assailed this bill, but whether he is against it simply because he is afraid it will be held unconstitutional, or against it because he is against it, I am unable to determine.

Let's have this anti-lynching bill passed, not only because lynching is bad in itself, but because lynching, like capital punishment, never was any preventer of crime.

WILLIAM E. DIXON.
Washington, Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Opposition to the several anti-lynching bills which have been before Congress for the past 20 years has hinged upon the alleged unconstitutionality of such legislation. Senator William E. Borah, universally conceded to be the ablest constitutional lawyer in Congress, is the spearhead upon which the opposition chiefly relies. Senator Borah stated to me when the Dyer anti-lynching bill was before the Senate that he would rather see that measure enacted into law than any other proposal before that session of Congress if he could get the consent of his mind that it was constitutional. I urged upon him then, and now wish to repeat that urging, that he utilize his great legal talent to devise a substitute measure which would, in his judgment, stand the constitutional test, rather than exploit his great prestige and authority to bolster up the opposition.

There is not a single member of either house of Congress who does not profess the desire to put an end to the iniquity of lynching if some effective constitutional remedy might be found. After all, it is the duty of Congress to devise and enact legislation which it believes will promote the welfare of the Nation. It is the function of the Supreme Court to determine whether such legislation is valid or invalid. No member of Congress, however learned in the law, is able to tell beforehand whether any proposed piece of legislation is constitutional or not until five out of nine judges have passed upon it. No important measure has ever passed Congress concerning whose constitutionality learned members have not entertained and expressed grave doubt.

Because of the heated controversy which this measure has evoked there can be no doubt that it will be put to the constitutional test immediately after its passage through Congress and approval by the President. It is more than likely that the President will take this view instead of usurping the function of the Supreme Court by vetoing it on the ground of its alleged unconstitutionality. If the measure fails to meet the approval of this august tribunal Congress will then be in a position to devise a substitute measure which will run the gauntlet of constitutional objections.

Embassy Picket Ban.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent communications in defense of the embassy picketing ban are more concerned with some mythical national courtesy than with the international situation. It is hard to imagine a democratic or pseudo-democratic government refusing citizens the right to assembly or protest before representatives of foreign powers. When this right is denied, the very structure of our Government is in danger not from the so-called radicals we seek to suppress but from the reactionaries who seek to force dictatorship upon us by slipping over a ban that is as dangerous to our hard-won liberties as the unlamented "Red rider."

Mr. Pahnke represents the attitude of the British Tory—the type of citizen who is constantly longing for the "good old days"—when the King ruled America. He reveals his prejudice when he refers to "two supposed Italians" in a derogatory manner. These men were Italians, and many prominent American men and women protested the high-handed manner in which their innocent lives were taken by the Tory State of Massachusetts.

America should be proud of Sacco and Vanzetti—they represented the spirit of 1776—the spirit of tolerance and brotherhood. These two men, a poor fish peddler and a shoemaker, would have been glad to picket an embassy in defense of peoples who were having their liberties abrogated by Fascist dictators. We should also be glad to picket in America for democracy, because in a few years we will have little of it left to defend—if the Mr. Pahnkes have their way. VIRGINIAN.

Semmes Family.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just received a clipping from The Post of January 10, 1937. It was a beautifully written article, and I enjoyed it very much. However, my nonexistence is somewhat exaggerated in it.

In it, it is stated that Mrs. Luke Wright was the last survivor of the family of Raphael Semmes. In your last paragraph you mentioned that Admiral Semmes died leaving three sons and three daughters. The eldest of these sons was Oliver Semmes, who from the end of the Civil War until the time of his death lived in Mobile, Ala. Semmes had two sons and one daughter, named Oliver, Raphael and Amante. Raphael left no sons, but Oliver, who was Oliver, jr., is my father. I have no brothers, but have two sons to carry on the name, so there is great probability that there will be no extinction of the family name for some time to come.

To sum it up, I am the oldest son of the oldest son, back to the admiral. O. J. SEMMES, Jr.

Letter To An Aunt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have an aunt out in Kansas who writes and razzes me about Roosevelt. I wrote back:

"Trouble with your side is you're bad losers and the fewer your numbers the hotter you get. Enough explosions like these of yours would propel Roosevelt into a third term—if it hasn't already done it! In fact, if your side would make you their campaign manager we'd soon have 'H. R. H.' on all the dishes and table linen in the White House and F. D. would be there for keeps!"

Mrs. Roosevelt's Charity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Mrs. Roosevelt gives all her earnings to charity why does she not deduct from charity the amount of her income tax and pay it into the same place where other income taxes go? If her earnings go to the poor and needy she might at the least acknowledge that our United States Treasury is somewhat crippled. A PILGRIM.

"The Big Apple."

I SUPPOSE I was really quite happy, in my ladylike way, until last week. True, it was a sort of ignorance-is-bliss state, but nonetheless I was cool and unbothered. Now all that is changed—I find I can't "Big Apple."

The "Big Apple," according to the dancing masters, who met here last week, is as simple as one, two, three. It isn't done with mirrors and there's nothing tricky about it—a glide here, a skip there, and a few steps from the Virginia Reel for good measure. So I can't quite figure out why it's beyond me. Maybe it's the unexpected combination of modernistic shag and old-fashioned reel. Maybe it's the skip. Or maybe I was defeated before I started by that absolutely absurd name. "The Apple." And I'm not as young as I once was—can't shake it off like I could my inability to Charleston or my ineptitude for the Black Bottom.

Funny thing about the Charleston—my right side mastered it beautifully, but my left side would have none of it. I used to hold on to a chair or a door and go it like mad. That is, my right foot. My other foot made no more response to the rhythm than a wooden leg would to a pin prick. It created no end of embarrassing situations. I would start off in the middle of a crowded ballroom as gracefully as a tri-motored Douglas. Then the first thing I knew the old Jekyll-Hyde complex had reared its ugly head and my left side knew not what my right side was doing. But I kept at it, patiently, laboriously, ambitiously until finally I had reached a perfection topped only by Joan Crawford and a few other cup coppers. I might even add, that I was alone in my field. For by that time everybody else had turned to the Black Bottom.

The Black Bottom was one dance which could not be learned from chalk lines drawn on the floor. For the feet, as I remember, had very little to do with it. Perhaps it was that very lack which made ministers lean from their pulpits and denounce it. Born in Negro shacks down South, nurtured by collegiates and vaudevillians, it was a very short time a-dying. This seemed to suit everybody, because even its advocates were not long in realizing that one performance required more energy than three hard tennis sets, a day's weeding, and a jai lai match.

Just before the outbreak of the World War, there was the Grizzly Bear and the Bunny Hug. The steps to the Grizzly Bear were not steps at all. That was the whole point. You and your partner took a firm hold, picked out a likely place on the dance floor, and there you stayed. It was probably the beginning of these marathon endurance stunts. The first partner who moved off his little preserve and tried to stake another foot of ballroom space was a floor hog.

The Bunny Hug was more complicated and required much more room. The steps were short but fast and a really good Bunny Hugger, at his peak, resembled a late sleeper trying to make the 7:30. In other words, the point was to get to a given point as quickly as possible and at the same time maintain a fine air of indifference.

Then came the bob with Irene Castle under it. Along with short hair, Dutch caps, and the patent-leather-headed Vernon, she brought the Castle Walk. People thought that all they had to do to look like the Castles was walk up and down on their toes, give a childish swing on every other beat, and round the corners like an aeroplane banking a turn. Usually the Smiths and the Joneses added variations of their own, such a pump-handling, missing every beat, and twisting their heads until they looked more like autogiros.

Adding personal variations has ever been one of the most popular features of dancing. In 1934, a Manhattan teacher trimmed up the traditional Argentine tango with "cross over" and "travel steps." The result looked like a jumping bean crossed with a Washington motorist.

Two years ago, a San Francisco dancing teacher created a waltz to end all wallflowers. This was a dance in which two women could dance with one man. "The steps," he explained at the time, "are necessarily simple." It was always my regret that I did not send for lessons in "plain cover." I should have liked to know if I learned all the steps or only half of them, leaving the other half for the third angle of that strange terpsichorean triangle.

There is, of course, much more to dancing than dancing. There is, for instance, what my dancing teacher used to call "the approach." This may be brought on, I was taught, by longing glances at the stag line, fluttering eyelids, or the language of the fan. Then there is the proper way to refuse a man who is 10 inches shorter than you, the accepted etiquette for a girl who has no chances to refuse, a la Alice Adams, and the laughing exit, which denotes popularity where there is none. There is even, according to Mr. LeQuorne, of the Dancing Masters of America, a way to pick up a lady when doing the tango. The correct way is "to place one hand on her diaphragm and to use the other hand as a platform on which she can lean." The wrong way is to break all her ribs.

Isn't it strange how I know all this and still can't "Big Apple?"

Treasury Out On A Limb.

THE UNITED PRESS has a dispatch out of Washington reporting that the Bureau of Internal Revenue has been instructed to refrain from persecution and to give everyone a square deal in mopping up the cases against persons accused of employing clever little schemes to avoid income taxes. These instructions come from the Treasury Department, and they prove better than all speeches that have been made and all the protests that have been written the arrogance of a powerful Government department in its dealings with private citizens.

Mr. Roosevelt in his message on the subject of tax avoidance and evasion took the position that only the taxpayers or avoiders could possibly stoop to immoral or unethical practices, and completely ignored the notorious fact that the law enables reviewing agents to persecute individuals for political and personal reasons.

Nevertheless, officials of the Treasury have admitted that these employes of the Government have discretionary powers in certain income tax matters to approve or disallow deductions, according to their judgment or their personal disposition toward the citizen under review.

THIS AUTHORITY is such that a politician in charge of a revenue district may give an agent private and confidential instructions to harass a political or commercial rival with meddlesome inquiries into matters which are none of the Government's business, to pry deep into his personal affairs and, finally, to turn in an arbitrary and vindictive ruling on discretionary items which might just as reasonably be decided the other way. In short, it is a power to persecute.

The instructions to the bureau doubtless were prompted by criticism of the notion which has been encouraged in the personnel of the bureau that they are men to be feared and placated. For years nobody bothered to challenge this bulldozing conduct, and some reviewers developed the mental attitude of the old-time pot-bellied cop toward the Sicilian proprietor of the corner peanut and apple stand.

Not only could they put a man to great expense and trouble in the course of the review, but if they were so inclined they might put him to the necessity of defending himself against unjust and purely spiteful criminal charges.

And always there is the opportunity for a crook in the service to compromise a claim in the discretionary zone for a personal cash bribe—a fact which is frankly recognized by the Treasury but minimized on the ground that the men are high-class citizens and themselves subject to departmental espionage. High-class citizens some or most of them may be, but if their character is the taxpayers' protection against unjust treatment, then it is strange that the Treasury now should have to give the bureau a special admonition to refrain from persecution.

Very likely in these cases the bureau will make a special effort to be outwardly fair, but inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt and the Treasury Department took the attitude that the defendants were guilty of immoral and unethical practice, even before the Congressional hearings were started, it is improbable that any decisions will be given in favor of the accused, unless they want to go through expensive court proceedings.

THE PRESIDENT and the Treasury went out on a limb, convicting these people without trial, and it is hard to imagine a subordinate bureau of the Government sawing off that limb, whatever justice may be. It is up to the bureau to make their chiefs look good, and the boys, in their discretion, will do their stuff.

The power of the reviewer and the element of persecution which are written into the present law, as the Treasury has now acknowledged in its remarkable orders to the bureau, are no less dangerous than the so-called loopholes by which a few taxpayers may or may not escape paying their legal dues.

I believe this is the first time that a Government department has found it necessary to give its men special instructions not to persecute citizens. Yet if they are the type of people who need extraordinary orders on this point, and the law is such that persecution may be legally inflicted, there is something much more rotten on the Government's side than anything that was brought out against the defendants in the hearing.

Eclipse Of The Sun

By William Lyon Phelps

James Stokley.

There is no person I have more keenly envied this year than James Stokley, of the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia. For in the Pacific Ocean he saw the total eclipse of the sun on June 8, and the only reason I was not with him was a good one. It was the fiftieth reunion of my class at Yale and I could not give that up, no, not even for a total eclipse.

Only a few days ago I got Stokley's letter, written to me at sea, on his long way home from the eclipse. He writes:

"The sun was only 14 degrees from the zenith and the duration of totality, as measured by the captain on his stopwatch, was 7 minutes 6 seconds, or two seconds longer than the maximum! . . . The ship was steaming at about 8 knots in an easterly direction, the same as the moon's shadow, and so we kept up with it for four seconds more than if we had been stationary. Had we had a fast airplane, we might have had several minutes more."

"The entire scene was much brighter than we had expected. It has been supposed that the darkness of an eclipse depends largely on the size of the moon's shadow, and so here, with one of the largest shadows ever experienced, it should have been extremely dark . . We only saw Venus and Mercury, and a few first magnitude stars, and were able to read the instruments without any aid. Newspaper print could be read without any difficulty."

The last eclipse before this one that lasted 7 minutes was on June 3, 699 A. D. But the next 7-minute eclipse is coming soon, June 20, 1955. The Philippines will get it and so will I, unless I have a total eclipse myself. I shall be 90 years old.

• • • •

This expedition from which Mr. Stokley wrote me was arranged by Dr. John Q. Stewart, of Princeton, and James Stokley was his companion. The private observatory of Gustavus Wynne Cook, of Philadelphia, the finest amateur observatory in the world, was represented by Mr. Stokley, as well as the Franklin Institute, for it was Mr. Cook's generosity that made his journey possible. And the ship, named Steelmaker, came from the Isthmian Steamship Co., a subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

They saw the eclipse at 130 degrees 38 minutes west longitude and 9 degrees 50 minutes north latitude, "in a vast empty region of the Pacific Ocean with no land nearer than 1,300 miles in any direction." How I envy them!

Let me recommend Mr. Stokley's recent and admirable book for the general public called "Stars and Telescopes," published by Harpers.

By David Wills.

London.

THE PARLIAMENTARY SESSION which began last November has ended, and Parliament will not resume business until next autumn unless a foreign crisis blows up during the summer. Mr. Neville Chamberlain is considered to have done a much better job as prime minister than had been expected. Critics claim to discern a general tightening up of government morale, which had been allowed to drift under the management of Mr. Baldwin, and even a firmer attitude toward the militant dictators of Europe.

In domestic affairs, at any rate, there is a general impression that things will be done; not of course in any drastic way, and not until troubles have made themselves familiar to us over a long period. But at least some sort of solution is being tried or discussed for a number of the more serious problems of the day; if tradition is followed, no steps will be proposed which seriously infringe established private rights, but within these limits we are to have action. So, at least, Mr. Chamberlain assures us.

Foreign affairs continue to cause the greatest controversy. Our official policy is still peace at almost any price. Nobody knows when the almost comes to a full stop. Under our new management it seemed at first that the dictators intervening in Spain were to be resisted firmly; Mr. Chamberlain put strong words into his communications. But the endeavors of the British to maintain the nonintervention committee in existence, when everyone knew that it was a complete farce, and nobody was deceived, suggested that the old Baldwin policy was still being pursued.

Government Firmness Displayed On Occasion.

WHENEVER there was a more open threat to the empire, such as guns at Gibraltar or diversion of Spanish iron ore from Britain to Germany and Italy, conservatives began to be agitated and the government put on a show of firmness, or at least acted as apologists for Gen. Franco and attempted to soothe the apprehension of the House. But otherwise it seemed that without undertaking any responsibilities we were happy to continue our public hand-washing performance as long as there was a nonintervention committee in existence.

It seems that there is more to Mr. Chamberlain's policy than this long drawn-out pretense. Not that Mr. Chamberlain has any doubts about which side he wishes to see win in Spain. There can no longer be any illusions about that; as a junior member of the government was heard to put it: We cannot tolerate that the government side in Spain should win. Nor is the government in the least concerned to revive the League of Nations. We are apparently well rid of all that altrustic nonsense; we deplore the bad taste of the Spanish government in bringing its troubles to Geneva, and just laugh at the credulity of the Chinese in talking of a similar appeal.

We are now back at the old game of power politics and pre-war diplomacy. We are to pursue, under the guidance of Mr. Chamberlain, a realist policy. Since the empire cannot of its own accord take on Japan, Germany and Italy at the same time, it must make friends with one or more of them. Since Germany and Italy are determined to see Franco win in Spain, and since we would like the same outcome, so long as we are not left out in the cold, we must make it certain that the victors are not our enemies. There must, of course, be no weakness about our actions, no cringing before dictators; but our strength is to be wrapped up with no fond sentimental illusions about a world-wide peace. Let the Chinese look after themselves, as we propose to look after ourselves.

Chamberlain Directing Foreign Affairs Himself.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN is looking after foreign affairs himself, and at present under his personal management we are busy making friends again with Italy. So long as we get guarantees about our position in the Mediterranean, it is obviously a realist policy to write the Abyssinian affair off the books.

It is not clear whether Chamberlain or Mussolini took the initiative in their recent exchange of letters, but it is not of great significance. Barkis was willin', whichever he was. And if all misunderstandings based on sentimental delusions can be eliminated, why not go further to secure the friendship of Italy and of Germany by agreeing to grant belligerent rights to Gen. Franco without any difficult stipulations about withdrawal of volunteers from both government and rebel armies?

How attractive it would be if the Conservative government could secure peace, the friendship of the dictators, defeat the incipient radical movement and bring home the goods without having to mention Geneva or collective security!

This line of argument is a logical continuation of the Baldwin policy. Under Baldwin, defeat the League. After a suitable period when pro-League opinion feels completely frustrated, and the foreign situation makes it difficult to oppose rearmament, make friends with the nations which were called enemies of the public by the League but turn out to be our old friends after all.

And in the present condition of public opinion in England it is a difficult program to oppose. For pro-League opinion is frustrated. It is not politically possible to oppose rearmament, and, as even Mr. Attlee, leader of the parliamentary Labor Party, found when he tried to get his followers to vote against the government on defense expenditure, the rank and file refused to make so open condemnation of the government because they knew it would be unpopular. And the new program may produce its results.

England Not Rejecting League Of Nations Ideal.

THIS IS NOT TO SAY that all England is turning imperialist or rejecting the League ideal. It is suggested by some critics that the government would discover the strength of League support if they came to the point of an imperialistic war. For it is clear that when the government says peace at almost any price, the limit is measured in terms of imperialism and self-interest, not in terms of altruism.

If this government does decide at some point that we must fight to protect the empire, it is suggested by some that a large body of public opinion will refuse to fight, on moral grounds. It is pointed out by way of contrast that in the World War we had both selfish and altruistic grounds for fighting, so that the nation was united. But I am unable to believe that the nation will find itself greatly disunited in the face of another selfish war; a moral excuse will be found rapidly enough. Those who object will be carried along in the flood just as the Labor Party finds itself being carried along in the rearmament flood.

There seems to me to be little doubt that the nation is inclined to give Mr. Chamberlain all the rope he wants. There have been constant attacks on his policies in the House of Commons, suspicions have been expressed both over his care in protecting the empire and his professed impartiality in the Spanish war. But his government refused to promise to call together Parliament if at any time during the vacation he thought it advisable to grant belligerent rights to Franco without securing a withdrawal of volunteers. Apparently this action might be taken without deviating seriously from the government's present policy.

By reducing the argument to the selfish level from the altruistic, and refusing to budge, the government can make it still more difficult for the opposition to become effective and fluent. For part of the opposition case was that since war with the dictators was inevitable it would be better to take war now rather than wait for it in the dictators' own time.

The government, by paying a suitable price, may succeed in postponing war for quite a long time; and can claim that it never was inevitable. The price paid involves the denial of the principles for which the altruists were prepared to fight; so that to reassert these principles may be made to appear as a claim that England should deliberately go to war on somebody else's business. No opposition could hope to overthrow the government on such a platform. It is now reduced to awaiting the day when it can say I told you so. And that time may be a long time coming.

Purchases Outrun Sales.

THE ENORMOUS surplus of imports over exports in Japan's foreign trade during the first half of 1937, as shown above, is of special interest because of recent developments in the Sino-Japanese dispute. In past months there have been substantial increases in the value of Japanese imports of iron, steel, copper, machinery, cotton and wool. To what extent these increases were connected with military preparations, it is impossible to say. There have been other contributing factors, notably the rise in prices of these materials and the progress of world economic recovery.

Japan's unfavorable trade balance is subjecting her exchange to considerable strain at a time when she is embarking on an extensive military program in North China. In order to correct this situation, the government is reported to be planning the drastic restriction of certain imports. For some months Japanese gold has been exported to meet the accumulating debts on international account. A good part of these shipments has consisted of newly mined gold from Korea, and the large gold reserves of the Bank of Japan have not been materially affected.

Recently Japan has been sending gold to the United States in greater quantity than was needed to pay her balances due to this country. In some quarters this procedure was regarded as an indication of preparations for possible conflict in the Far East. It is now known, however, that part of the gold sent to this country was used to obtain foreign exchange to finance Japanese purchases in other countries.

Those Soviet Polar Camp Weather Bulletins.

Tuesday.—Colder with light variable winds. Humidity unknown. Not a bead of perspiration in sight. Maximum temperature, 30 degrees Fahrenheit. Not sure now whether it is a case of low visibility or just nothing to see.

• • • •

Wednesday (Via Petrograd).—Clear and colder in north and south portions; similar condition in east and west portions. Maximum temperature, 32, with no demand for ice drinks or electric fan. Can picnic anywhere without seeing a single red ant. And they say we Russians aren't smart!

• • • •

Thursday (Via Warsaw).—Cloudy with slightly harder icebergs. Slept under quilts last night. Colder tomorrow or your money back. Haven't seen a hot-weather "Don'ts" list since arrival. Maximum temperature still 32, unless thermometer is stuck. Life is tough, but it has its compensations. For instance, we didn't have to read a line about those yacht races.

• • • •

Friday (Via Moscow).—Weather unchanged except for more snow. Maximum temperature still 32 asked; 33 bid. It is a great relief to live in a country where you don't have to change your shirt twice a day. It is rather slushy and disagreeable, but we can't get hay fever.

• • • •

We are now on second with nobody out.

Wired Stalin, who instructed us to shoot ice floe in morning. Quite exasperating at times, but we don't have to stand for beach roasts, $1 shore dinners or bathing beauties selling chances on a canoe. We shot a polar bear today for spying on camp.

• • • •

Sunday (Via Bronx).—Colder with slight lifting of the complaints. Wind optional. We rounded up seals on disloyalty charge today. They all pleaded guilty in a body and said it was a pleasure to die for Russia.

Will execute them as soon as arrangements can be made with newsreel people.

Maximum temperature, 32. Minimum temperature, 32. Ice shifted again and moved us back to our first base. We are still claiming it was a balk.

Only 15 Soviet airplanes passed over the Pole today for the United States. Our Soviet air service appears to have gone to hell. Tomorrow colder.

President Roosevelt, passing up the Senate harmony dinner, sent a letter to Senator Barkley. But not even a postcard to Wheeler or Harrison.

The House has voted to give President Roosevelt six assistants with "a passion for anonymity" at $10,000 a year. A passion for anonymity, as understood these days in America, is a hot desire to avoid getting on more than five radio programs a day and not getting sore if the newsreel men are 10 minutes late.

When Steel paid off all its back dividends the other day and reported the best business since 1929, the reddest faces in America must have been those of those brokers and market experts (and they were in the great majority) who advised against buying the common when it was down around $30 a share.

More About the "Biggest Little City"

RENO, NEV., Aug. 11.—There's nothing new in Nevada. Maybe, it's the angle that makes the difference. Whatever it is, they do things in a big way. They work just about like the comic Englishman, in a decade old novel, who figured Americans might work. They do things on a big scale and they do them quickly.

They started work on the Ten Commandments; saw the commercial possibilities, organized and exploited. They saw that a lot of people were breaking them. They decided to get their cut for helping them out. They legislated to protect wine, women and chance. In that, they stole a march on the other States.

Nevada is a rich State. It doesn't look like much. It looks like something the Indians abandoned to the sagebrush. Under that wasteland is gold and silver and all sorts of precious metals. That wasn't enough, however. They foresaw a scoop in reversing the Ten Commandments. Churches had been going in the nole for years, reading them straight out.

They legalized gambling. They legalized prostitution. They said it was all right to covet another man's wife if you became a resident for six weeks. They found an oasis in the valley of the Truckee River and there they built their mecca for neurotics. It brought in the cash. It left them more time to till their own gardens and cultivate their souls.

RENO IS THE biggest city in Nevada. It has only about 20,000 people, but they call it the Biggest Little City in the world. It probably is. It is also a beautiful city. It is a verdant oasis in a waste of sagebrush. It is a city of neat, well kept, prosperous homes. It has a university . . . lacking the persuasive mellowness of the older ones . . . but brisk, bright and clean, with its new buildings, well-sodded lawns and earnest children.

The boys and girls at the university don't go down to Center street where the gambling houses thresh gold from the ranchers, the tourists, the workers and the bindle stiffs. Ladies are [illegible] "stockade," built to satisfy the tourists and protect the good women.

Nevada college girls are clean and wholesome. They are also "broad minded." They can understand the need for the "stockade." They could probably understand the Greek democracy in which all men could vote, but slaves weren't to be considered as men. They wouldn't consider that the fault of the democracy.

The boys in Nevada, who attend the nice, brisk, university with the sweet, well-sodded lawns, like to "binge" occasionally. But they can't go into the gambling houses. The managers throw the university students out. Those are the orders. Gambling houses are not for students, they are for ranchers and workers, Chinamen and tourists, miners and bindle stiffs.

Thoreau said that most people would rather wear a bad conscience than a patched suit. Lawns and gardens are assiduously cultivated in Reno. Churches are well attended. There is a crooked lawyer in Chicago who bathes four times a day. Psychologists call that a purification fixation. Residents of Reno are to be seen each night cultivating their gardens, and clearing their well-tufted lawns.

RENO IS "honky-tonk" and Reno is one of the prettiest little cities you'll ever see. Its citizens rarely go down to Center street to gamble. That is left to the tourists. You can count the cars. Six out of eight cars on Center street are those of tourists. They don't go down to the "stockade" so often either, and they are glad that there is no solicitation on their streets.

Citizens of Reno stay home and raise their children in the fear and love of God, beside the street the prostitutes, the divorcees and the gamblers paid for. Success is accomplished in taking advantage of the failures. Success is the trimming of rich neurotics. Success is a quiet garden, beside a street kept smiling and new, by "fallen women" who must not solicit beyond the bars of the "stockade."

NEVADA IS a young State, they'll tell you. It has the surging buoyancy of youth. You can't hold it down!

Nevada is a young State! It has the surging buoyancy of youth. You can see that in the lost eyes of the prostitutes, and you can note that youthful verve, that seeking for untrammeled self-expression, in the pot-bellied dealers in the gaming halls. You can see that in the bindle stiff, who pawned his suit for money to play, and now sits at one side of the gaming room, forlorn in the waste of oversize mission clothes. Gamblers are big hearted people. They are free with their money. They will not turn the bindle stiff over to the police. They'll let him sleep till morning, when he can hitch a freight out of town.

Nevada is a young State! It is a vigorous State! You can see that in the admixture of neurotic ladies, Chinamen, Filipinos, miners, ranchers and tourists about the gambling tables. You can see that in the pasty complexions, the sagging bellies, and the dragging feet of a drunk crossing the floor.

RENO IS NEVADA, organized, and softened up. It is a town of church goers and home people. They line the block in front of the theater when Shirley Temple is featured. They have money to go to movies. Nevada is a rich State! It is rich in mines, and cattle, and farms. It gets its "take" from the tourists, the easy divorces, the gambling and the prostitution. With that money you can build fine roads! You can build a university! You can see Shirley Temple.

With that money, you cannot clarify the groping in the lost eyes of a prostitute. You cannot straighten out a bindle stiff. You cannot right a marriage. You cannot rectify a failure. You can, however, build roads and gain time to cultivate your garden and your soul.

With that money you can buy Dobbs hats, ride airplanes and rank third highest in the use of electricity. You can have one phone for every three people in Reno. You can have a bonded indebtedness of less than a million dollars, for your State.

You can have New York cowboys, singing to Chicago divorcees. You can have a cheery smile. And you can have a guest list which would better suit a psychiatric ward.

Army Control Of Floods and Power Vetoed

Roosevelt Says He Will Present Plan of Own in January.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a Senate proposal authorizing Army engineers to submit to Congress a comprehensive flood control-power plan because, he said, "local and regional" planning would be ignored.

The President told the Senate he would present to Congress in January a plan similar to that proposed in the vetoed bill, but he said it would be prepared by all Government agencies concerned, instead of by the War Department alone.

The President recalled that on June 3 he proposed for Congressional action a "thoroughly democratic process of national planning of the conservation and utilization of the water, and related land, resources of our country."

He said such a process should start at the bottom through initiation of planning work in the State and local units, that it should contemplate regional programs, the integration of fiscal and conservation policies on a national basis, and submission of a comprehensive development program to Congress by the President.

"The reverse of such a process of national planning is prescribed in Senate joint resolution 57," the President's veto message said.

"By this resolution the War Department would become the national planning agency not alone for flood control but for all the other multiple uses of water."

"I propose," the President concluded, "to present to the Congress in January a comprehensive national plan for flood control and prevention and the development of water and soil conservation, such plan to be prepared by all of the many Government agencies concerned."

Reward Is Offered In Kidnaping of 3

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—The American Civil Liberties Union announced today a reward of $1,000 "for information leading to the arrest and final conviction of any persons participating in the kidnaping of Labor Leaders Herbert Harris, George Lambert and George Baer, in Dallas, Tex., August 9."

Roger N. Baldwin, director of the union, said Baer was beaten and Harris and Lambert were "smeared with oil and feathers."

They said a reply from George Clarke, the Governor's secretary, stated that in Allred's absence, acting Gov. Walter F. Woodul requested an investigation by the public safety commission at Austin.

50,000 Quit Jobs In C.I.O. Silk Strike

By the United Press.

The Department of Labor announced last night that 50,000 workers in silk mills of three States had quit their jobs as the result of the strike call issued by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Simultaneously, Secretary Frances Perkins appointed Father Francis J. Haas, former official of the first National Labor Relations Board, as a special mediator to attempt settlement of the dispute.

Officials said the five-day old strike was largely concentrated in the mills of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Text of Flood Bill Veto

I return herewith without my approval Senate joint resolution No. 57, entitled, "Joint Resolution to authorize the submission to Congress of a comprehensive national plan for the prevention and control of floods of all the major rivers of the United States, development of hydroelectric power resources, water and soil conservation, and for other purposes."

In my message of June 3, 1937, I proposed for consideration of Congress, a thoroughly democratic process of national planning of the conservation and utilization of the water, and related land, resources of our country. I expressed the belief that such a process of national planning should start at the bottom through the initiation of planning work in the State and local units, and that it should contemplate the formulation of programs on a regional basis, the integration of fiscal and conservation policies on a national basis, and the submission of a comprehensive development program to the Congress by the President.

The reverse of such a process of national planning is prescribed in Senate joint resolution No. 57. By the resolution the War Department would become the national planning agency, not alone for flood control, but for all the other multiple uses of water. Although the Department of Agriculture would prepare reports on run-off retardation and soil erosion prevention, and the Department of the Interior be consulted on reclamation projects, the War Department would report for these co-ordinate agencies directly to Congress instead of to the Chief Executive. The local and regional basis of planning would be ignored, and there would be no review of the whole program, prior to its presentation to Congress, from the standpoints of national budgetary considerations and national conservation policies.

The corps of Army Engineers has had wide experience in the building of flood control projects and has executed the projects entrusted to it with great skill and ability. Its experience and background is not alone sufficient, however, for the planning of a comprehensive program for the development of the vast water and related resources of the Nation.

The planning of the use and control of water and related resources is distributed by law among numerous governmental agencies, such as the Departments of Agriculture and Interior, the Federal Power Commission, the United States Public Health Service, the International Boundary Commission, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The joint resolution encroaches upon the functions of these agencies, and ignores and duplicates the co-ordinated planning work already in progress under the general guidance of the National Resources Committee.

I find it impossible to subscribe, therefore, to the proposal that has been embodied in this joint resolution.

This does not mean, however, that the objective of this joint resolution cannot be attained without the need of any legislation whatsoever. I propose to present to the Congress in January a comprehensive national plan for flood control and prevention and the development of water and soil conservation, such plan to be prepared by all of the many Government agencies concerned.

I trust that this will meet all of the desires of the Congress.

Last Camp Session Opens Tomorrow

Girl Scouts at Camp May Flather will begin their final session of camp activities tomorrow. A group of local girls will leave here to join the 49 girls who are remaining there for another session. Approximately 360 Girl Scouts have enjoyed a vacation at the camp this summer.

Acting Superintendent of National Parks Frank T. Gartside yesterday announced the schedule for next week's concerts.

The United States Army Band will play Monday at the D. C. World War Memorial, West Potomac Park, 7:30-9:00 p. m., and again Tuesday at the same place, from 8:00-9:30 p. m. Thursday the United States Marine Band will present a concert from 7:30-9:00 p. m. at West Potomac Park.

Huge Gold Shipment.

By the Associated Press

Japan sent a new $13,751,000 chunk of gold across the Pacific the week ended August 6, a Commerce Department report showed yesterday. It was the largest item of this country's $32,236,349 gold imports during the week ended August 6.

Nutrition Expert Advises Hot Food For Keeping Cool

There is a secret to keeping cool these hot days, according to Mrs. William G. Finn, nutritionist of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. Mrs. Finn unfolded her plan yesterday.

She advocates a balanced diet and something warm for each meal.

Take that cold plate dinner, for instance. It tasted delicious as you washed it down with iced beverages, she said, but how do you feel the day after?

Now, if the meal had included a bowl of hot soup, according to Mrs. Finn, your digestion would have been better your sleep probably more restful and you would have jumped out of bed on the "right side."

Then there is the psychological side of the heat. To a certain extent, according to Mrs. Finn, discomfort in warm weather is "all in the head."

Busy persons, whose minds are not on the subject, seldom complain about the heat, she said.

Legion Suggests Auditorium as D. C. Memorial

Would Be Raised by Post Benefits; Bush, Mason Run for Commander.

The District departmetn of the American Legion last night asked that an auditorium be erected in Washington as a national memorial to the legion

Jammed into the flag-bedecked ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower at the second meeting of their three-day annual convention, the legionnaires adopted such a resolution and then nominated Porter L. Bush, of Lincoln Post, and Thomas Mason, jr., of the Second Division Post, as candidates for department commander.

The auditorium, it was specified in the resolution, would be the type of building long sought by Washington citizens and would provide ample space for auto shows, conventions and other public gatherings. It was proposed the auditorium be paid for with funds raised from benefits held by posts throughout the country, and that the matter be submitted to the National Legion convention.

The department also went on record as favoring some form of representative government and some form of participation in the franchise for District residents.

The convention recommended creation of a five-member advisory committee on employment. This committee would consider the establishment of a permanent employment register at local department headquarters.

Ask Emergency Committee

Another important proposal brought out of the resolutions committee by its chairman, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, asked for the creation of a legion emergency committee. This committee, to be appointed by the department commander and the department executive committee, would form special legion units in time of any emergeney in the community. The resolution stated such action had become necessary because of the growing disrespect for the Constitution and laws and the increase in "subversive and law-defying agencies."

Mason, present department adjutant, was put into nomination for the high department post by Ray L. Zwinzlas, department vice commander. Bush, a past commander of Lincoln Post, was nominated by Eugene Costello, of George E. Killeen Post.

Candidates named for first vice commander were Joseph L. Koehl, of the Department of Agriculture Post, and Fred Money, commander of Sergt. Jasper Post.

Fox, Minnigh Honored.

George Fox, commander of the Tanks Corps Post, and Fred Minnigh, of the Government Printing Office Post, were named candidates for third vice commander.

After Department Commander Horace W. Lineburg opened last night's meeting, J. Bryan Hobbs, commander of the Maryland department, suggested that a "national parade of the American Legion down historic Pennsylvania avenue would form one of the greatest national patriotic demonstrations that this country has ever seen." His suggestion, tantamount to a plea for a national legion convention here, was echoed by Charles W. Crush, commander of the Virginia department.

A squabble which delayed the meeting for some minutes followed the report of Credentials Committee Chairman George J. Rohrich. The fight centered around the ranking of two alternate delegates from the Government Printing Office Post, Roy Musick and F. L. Bruder. The two were originally tied for the No. 1 alternate position in the post election. Results of a second election gave Musick the edge.

Lineburg Supported.

When several delegates objected to Lineburg's ruling that Musick should be given the preferred position, the matter went to a vote. Lineburg was upheld, 129 to 52.

It voted for the creation of a three-man Americanization Commission and to present medals to outgoing detachment commanders of the Sons of the American Legion.

As a method of honoring dead comrades, the body voted to recommend to the national convention that the Sunday in November each year falling nearest to Armistice Day be designated "Go-to-Church Sunday."

The local legionnaires decided to ask the national convention to designate the District Department guard-of-honor as the official guard-of-honor of the legion. It was explained that the local guard takes part in ceremonies at the Capitol and at Arlington Cemetery.

Preference Legislation.

The department reaffirmed its stand for veterans' preference legislation and voted to request the national body to adopt legislative principles which would provide preference for veterans in Government advancement and would not allow veterans employed by the Government to be furloughed, discharged or subjected to pay slashes except for cause and after preferment of charges.

Another resolution favored liberalization of acts for veteran relief by restoring the right to judicial review of decisions by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

Also approved were the Copeland-Bloom bill to promote and extend kindergartens throughout the country, and the Curley bill to extend home mortgage relief.

Mrs. Lillian K. Smith's Funeral Is Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian K. Smith, 55, who died Thursday at Emergency Hospital after a long illness, will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in H. M. Padgett's funeral home, 131 Eleventh street southeast. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith was the widow of William Smith. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Martha A. Marceron, with whom she made her home at the Lincoln Apartments, 131 Twelfth street southeast.

4 Washingtonians On Marine Staff In Shanghai Area

Chief responsibility for protecting the 4,000 Americans in the shell-raked Shanghai war zone rests with Col. Charles F. B. Price, broad-shouldered 55-year-old commander of the Fourth Marines.

Col. Price, smart looking in his uniform and 6 feet tall, became prominent first when he was on duty in connection with the American Electoral Mission in Nicaragua, whose task it was to insure a fair election of Nicaraguan officials after the government there was reorganized.

He received several medals, including the Navy's Distinguished Service Medal and the Nicaraguan Presidential Medal of Merit, and his tour of duty was commended by the State Department.

Col. Price was born in Hamburg, Germany, of American parents. His home is in Wayne, Pa., and he has seen service in Cuba, Panama, Mexico, France and China as well.

Four Washingtonians are on his staff in the fighting area. They are Lieut. Col. W. H. Rupertus, commanding the First Battalion; Capt. R. M. Cutts, jr., Capt. J. R. Lanigan and First Lieut. W Asmuth, jr

Mrs. Mary Luckett Dies at Home Here

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Luckett, 53, lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at her home, 615 Fern place northwest. She had been ill since last October.

Mrs. Luckett leaves her husband, Harry J. Luckett; two sons, Thomas and Eugene Luckett; a sister, Mrs. Eleanor Skelly; a brother, George W. Eckloff, all residents of Washington, and two other sisters, Mrs. Frances Davis, Huntsville, Md., and Mrs. Pearl Curtin, Capitol Heights, Md.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 at W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

Girl, 13, Missing 4 Days, Refuses To Return Home

Nadene Irene Vandergrift, 13, whose disappearance Tuesday suggested a second "Doris Major case," was at the Receiving Home last night, located by police after an absence of three days. Police said the girl refused to go home.

The girl was recognized by Tony Salvaggio, usher in an F street theater, who had clipped her pictures from the newspapers. Salvaggio, who is an usher, called police after he was certain the girl he had seen in the lobby was Miss Vandergrift.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vandergrift, of 5078 Sherrier place northwest. When her disappearance was first reported, friends said the girl had been deeply interested in Doris Major's disappearance.

Rains Put Out Lights In Anacostia for 2 Hrs.

Anacostia was thrown into darkness last night for more than two hours when heavy rains washed down an open manhole cover at Nichols avenue and W street southeast and short-circuited a number of main power lines.

Mrs. Santina Miletti Funeral Rites Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Santina (Sadie) Miletti, of 958 Shepherd street northwest, who died Thursday at Garfield Memorial Hospital, will be held this morning at her late residence at 8:30 o'clock. Requiem mass will be celebrated at 9 a. m. at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church. Interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mrs. Miletti leaves two sons, Frank and Providence Miletti, and a daughter, Mrs. H. D. Francesco.

Tinker Dies in Chair As Girl's 'Stomp' Slayer

The condemned man, who had refused food since he was brought to the prison Wednesday, was assisted to the death chamber by two guards. He was convicted at Hazelhurst, Ga., last December after a trial in which the State charged he "stomped" the girl, Maude Salters, because she had a date.

Poisoned Md. Girl Saved by Druggist In Bethesda Store

Prompt action by a pharmacist in a Bethesda drug store probably saved the life of Miss Helen Harrison, 20, of Garret Park, Md., yesterday. According to the Montgomery County police, the young woman had swallowed poison while eating lunch in the store.

A companion, Miss Frances Meyers, of 4201 Leland street, Chevy Chase, with whom Miss Harrison is visiting, had walked to the counter when she heard Miss Harrison scream. The pharmacist administered an antidote.

Miss Harrison was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda rescue squad. She was reported as improving last night.

President Starts Week-End Cruise

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt embarked on the yacht Potomac tonight for a week-end cruise on Chesapeake Bay.

The yachting party included Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana; Mrs. Eleanor Townsend, of New York; Miss Marguerite Le Hand, personal secretary; Col. Edwin M. Watson, military aide; Capt. Paul Bastedo, naval aide, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, naval physician.

Roosevelt Studies Conflict in Views On D.C. Tax 'Rider'

President Roosevelt said yesterday that seven departments and bureaus had submitted reports on the new District tax bill, and that not all of them agreed on the wisdom of the Tydings' "price maintenance" rider that is tacked on to it.

The President ndicated he had not made up his mind as to whether he will sign the bill. Unless he acts by Wednesday, the bill will have received a "pocket veto."

The Tydings' rider, which has nothing to do with local taxes, is the only controversial feature of the bill. Aimed at the practice whereby some establishments sell an article below cost to attract customers, it has been denounced by its critics as a menace which will substantially raise the cost of living. The President himself criticized the original legislation on that ground in January.

King and Il Duce View War Games

Castelvetrano, Sicily, Aug. 13 (AP). King Vittorio Emanuele, Crown Prince Umberto and Premier Mussolini braved a broiling sun today to witness an "enemy" landing on the shores of this Italian island, opening phase of Italy's annual war games.

Moving rapidly under a smoke-screen, the "Red" army of invaders landed from warships and transports in face of a stout "blue" defense and began a drive to capture the island. Some 50,000 troops were involved.

Blank Torpedo's Dash Upsets Newport Harbor

Newport, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP) — An unloaded torpedo, fired from the submarine Cachlot, plowed through Newport's inner harbor today, narrowly missing Vincent Astor's Nourmahal, many times the floating White House, and Frederick C. Prince's luxurious yacht Lone Star.

The torpedo mechanism, Capt. Irving C. Johnson of the submarine explained went awry. It sped through the harbor until it hit a rock, was tossed high in the air and shoreward, striking an iron fence on the harbor-front estate of Hamilton Fish Webster.

Gas Execution Witness Dies of Heart Attack

Canon City, Colo., Aug. 13 (AP).—Ed Hamilton, 55, Pueblo, an official witness, died of a heart attack tonight while watching the execution of Frank Aguilar, 34, in Colorado's lethal gas chamber.

WPA Costs $446,378,503.

The Works Progress Administration said yesterday the cost of materials, supplies, and equipment used on its projects through June 30 was $446,378,503, of which 41 per cent was contributed by local Government agencies.

Goebel Concern Starts Abattoir Despite Threats

McCarran to Call Hearing on Slaughter-House Bill Next Week.

Notwithstanding the legislative "threats" pending in Congress, the Adolf Gobel Co. yesterday resumed construction of a $500,000 slaughter house at Benning. The plant is designed, when running at full capacity, to handle 489 animals an hour.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of a Senate District sub-committee handling a bill aimed at the abattoir, may call a hearing on the measure next week. It would ban so-called "nuisance industries" in the Capital.

McCarran's sub-committee started hearings on the bill, but these were interrupted by the fight over enlarging the United States Supreme Court. Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, has told McCarran that testimony could be completed in two days.

House Tabled Bill.

The House District Committee tabled a similar bill after representatives of the Gobel Co. said they would move the slaughter house away from the city if given $300,000 as compensation.

Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, has introduced a bill which would limit the amount of waste an industrial plant might unload on the city's sewage disposal plant. The idea was born in the brain of Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, who has been a leader in the fight against construction of the slaughter house.

To Be Finished in Six Months.

D. Edward Clarke, local attorney for the Gobel firm, yesterday notified the office of the District building inspector that work was being resumed on the abattoir. He said the plant should be finished in about six months.

"We delayed resuming work on the Benning plant for several months as a courtesy to Congress while legislation was pending," Clarke said. "The company has lost money by this delay and it feels that it cannot afford to lose more.

"Gobel Co. is going to see to it in the interests of the people of the District of Columbia that a model plant will be constructed, nothwithstanding the apparent objections on the part of the Commissioners."

Clarke said construction of the plant will give employment to about 200 men, who will be hired locally.

'Evolution' Teacher Convicted as Cruel; Barred From Job

Waynesburg Pa., Aug. 13 (U.P.).—A middle-aged rural teacher tonight was refused reinstatement to the one-room school from which she was dismissed for allegedly teaching that "man was a monkey without a tail."

The school's board of directors, composed of four farmers and a mechanic, found Mrs. Laura Elms Morris, 43, mother of two children, guilty of "cruelty" and incompetence.

In a statement, the board said Mrs. Morris "spent the greater part of the recitation period, which should have been spent in hearing the pupils recite, in telling about her ancestors and advising them that the human race originated from monkeys."

The board also found Mrs. Morris guilty of cruelty and alleged she beat several pupils with "boards, paddles, straps and also an iron poker."

Friday 13 Brings Freedom for Man Forgotten in Jail

Maybe some persons didn't want Friday the 13th to roll around, but it was a lucky day for Garnett Head, who has been in the District Jail for a month while police waited in vain for a copy of a bench warrant from Sheriff J. A. Martin, of Greenville, S. C.

Detective Sergt. R. J. Cox received a telegram July 9 asking the arrest of Head, who was wanted in Greenville

Navy to End Maneuvers.

San Pedro, Calif., Aug. 13 (AP).—Maneuvers which took the U. S. fleet to Panama, Hawaii and Alaska will close tonight when a "blue" and a "black" force fight a theoretical battle for the southern California coastline.

2 Die in British Storm.

London, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Southern England's worst rainstorm in 27 years caused two deaths tonight, dropped 60,000,000 tons of water on London, trapped more than 1,000,000 homegoing workers, paralyzed transportation systems and stranded thousands of vehicles.

Joe, Dog Mascot Of 66th Infantry, Dies of Old Age

Oldest canine mascot in the United States, Old Joe succumbed to the ravages of age, and a soldier found him lifeless in one of the barracks, where he crept at night to sleep and dream of days when he followed the men in uniform with the ardor of a new recruit.

Origin of Old Joe was subject of many stories. Some veterans said a frisky puppy had come bounding out of a deserted sausage shop when the Army of Occupation marched into the Rhineland.

Others said he was a peasant's dog, attracted to the rumble of the cannon in November, 1918, just before the armistice.

Men came and men went in the Sixty-sixth, but Old Joe lived on. When the regiment was mechanized, he ran yapping in the wake of the tanks at maneuvers. Then he grew too old, and merely guarded the children of officers.

Beloved by the regiment, Old Joe was buried late yesterday. A monument to him will be erected near the barracks.

Black Court Choice Satisfies Comer

Sylacauga, Ala., Aug. 13 (AP).—Donald Comer, one of the South's largest textile manufacturers, said tonight President Roosevelt's choice of Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, for the Supreme Court "is satisfactory to me," as "an employer of labor."

Comer, son of a former Alabama Governor and head of a textile mill chain employing 7,000 workers, was mentioned prominently as a possible successor to Black in the Senate.

"I've always had a high regard and a great faith in Hugo Black's objectives and purposes," Comer said.

One Slain, 2d Shot After Pistol Theft

Chicago, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Homeward-bound "Loop" workers were imperiled tonight by a wild shooting affray in which one man was killed and a woman bystander slightly injured.

Police said William Fletcher, 30, walked into a shooting gallery in the heart of the downtown area, grabbed a target pistol from a table and attempted to flee. Thomas Avgerinos, 46, owner of the gallery, picked up a rifle and gave chase. Fletcher ran a few steps, whirled and fired two shots, one striking Mrs. Sallie Willis. Her wound was slight. Avgerinos fired four shots, three of them striking Fletcher in the chest. He died en route to a hospital.

First Lady Patron Of Loyalist Fiesta; Pro-Fascists Rage

New City, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Sponsored by a group of stage, screen, and literary luminaries, and with the name of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heading the list of patronesses, a projected fiesta to aid the children of Spanish Loyalists was the focus of a storm of protest tonight from American sympathizers of insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The fiesta is scheduled for tomorrow on the extensive estate of Adolf Zukor, film magnate. The Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de Los Rios, plans to attend.

Chief spokesman for the dissidents thus far is Mrs. Alice V. O'Leary, wife of Arthur T. O'Leary, prominent New York lawyer and president of the Catholic Laymen's League, who declared the fiesta "is an unnecessary affront to so many like me who believe Gen. Franco's followers are fighting for Christian civilization and culture against the anarchists and communists who now rule red Spain."

George Brent Testifies He Wed Under 'Pressure'

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (AP).—George Brent testified today "pressure" was brought to bear in his marriage to Constance Worth, actress, in Tia Juana, Lower California, May 10. The actor seeks an annulment on the ground they did not comply with Mexican marriage laws.

"We were going to Tiajuana to be married," Brent testified. "I finally agreed because of the pressure. By that I mean——" Miss Worth's attorney interrupted and sought to have that testimony stricken but the court refused. The nature of the pressure remained unexplained.

Character Training in U. S. Schools Will Be Sought by Women's Clubs

Program of Educational Group Announced by Mrs. Whitehurst.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Compulsory studies in character building and crime prevention in the Nation's schools will be urged this season under the program of the Department of Education of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, its chairman, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, has announced.

In line with the statement of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that "there is no reason why education against crime should not be a primary factor in our common schools—it should be listed as more important than reading, writing and arithmetic," the federation proposes to support a movement for direct character education.

"Many school authorities contend the entire school course is designed to build character as well as to provide academic education," said Mrs. Whitehurst, "and we recognize that it does, but something more is obviously needed. With an annual crime bill estimated at more than $15,000,000,000 (which means a per capita cost to our citizens of $120 a year), this country is faced with the challenge to devise a remedy.

"We turn naturally to the home, the school and the church. Where the home fails as a center for character building, it is likely that the church will not be given a chance. The school becomes the next logical place to reach the child.

Nebraska Leads In Legislation

"The forty-third session of the Nebraska Legislature was significant in that a law was passed establishing a program of character education. This law, passed in 1927, marks one of the first instances in which a Commonwealth set up legislative machinery, definitely charging schools, both public and private, with responsibility for giving the same attention to character building as to teaching the so-called "fundamentals."

Mrs. Whitehurst was conferring here at general federation headquarters this week, accompanied by Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs. She presented her education program to the spring meeting of the general federation council held in Tulsa, where it was accepted.

In her proposals, she suggests that the clubs investigate the school courses in their communities to ascertain whether or not direct methods of character education are used, and that they sponsor conferences of school authorities, the clergy and laymen to consider the subject of crime prevention from the standpoint of the entire community and the efficient functioning of various agencies designed to combat it and to direct the activities of young people in constructive channels.

Name Proposed For Vice President

Mrs. Whitehurst, whose name has been proposed by the Maryland State Federation for the office of first vice president of the general federation, to be voted on at the biennial convention in Kansas City next year, will take the message of crime prevention to the clubs of many States this fall. She has 65 invitations to address State and district meetings in Colorado, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, North Carolina, Virginia, Vermont and Massachusetts. In Indiana alone she will speak before two universities and 17 clubs. She will devote most of October and November to her tour. In Kansas she will speak before five district federation meetings and the Kiowa Council of Women.

Mrs. Edwin Miller, of Peru, Ind., is chairman of the sub-committee on character education. The program of the department of education also embraces library service, of which Mrs. C. W. Hevener, of Nebraska, is chairman; adult education, Mrs. W. T. Lefferty, of the University of Kentucky, chairman; public instruction, Mrs. C. E. Hester, of Louisiana, chairman; conservation of youth, Miss Willie Lawson, of Little Rock, Ark., chairman, and conservation of natural resources, Mrs. H. G. Bogart, of Colorado, chairman.

'Key Women' Plan to Attend Round Tables

100 Groups Represented at Williams Conference Opening Aug. 30.

The ways whereby group prejudices may be diminished in American life will be discussed by representative "key women" from more than 100 women's organizations at a series of conferences at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., from August 30 through September 3. Miss Josephine Schain, chairman of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, has announced the conferences to be held in connection with the 1937 Institute of Human Relations.

Leading the round table for women's organizations will be five principal speakers: Mrs. Mary Swain Routzahn, director of the department of social work interpretation of the Russell Sage Foundation; Mrs. Marion M. Miller, executive director, National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor; Mrs. Edgerton Parsons, vice chairman of the national committee on the cause and cure of war, and Miss Pauline Mandigo, of the Phoenix News Bureau.

Mrs. Routzahn will speak on factors in the growth of prejudice; Mrs. Miller on "Developing Public Opinion for Peace;" Mrs. Parsons on prejudice in schools and social groups; Miss Anderson on the labor point of view, and Miss Mandigo on the relationship of women's organizations to the agencies of public opinion—the press, the motion picture and the radio.

"These discussions will have a great significance to the millions of American women who are organized in club and other groups, who believe in American democracy, and who are ahxious to share in the responsibilities of it," Miss Schain said in her announcement.

"In this Williamstown Institute we will be trying to learn the methods by which we may help erase from American life many of those prejudices which becloud and poison the relations between groups of citizens who should be working together more effectively for common aims. Before we can help allay them we must understand the varying points of view which sometimes create them. We must learn to value the diversity of opinion to be found in a free country.

"The delegates to the Williamstown round tables will be key women whose influence goes far in the church, club, social and civic welfare groups from which they come. They will represent three great religious faiths of the country—Catholicism, Judaism and Protestantism."

The round tables at Williamstown will be the opening activity of a Nation-wide campaign by the national conference of Jews and Christians, during the autumn and winter of 1937, to organize women's groups opposing intergroup prejudice. Conferences are planned for 25 cities.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS. KARL FENNING, president of the Twentieth Century Club, with Mr. Fenning, yesterday returned to their country place near Rockville, Md., after a brief stay in Washington.

They are making repairs on the farm cottage which is their summer home, putting an addition on the living room and adding panelled walls and new floors. The interesting thing about it is that the man directing the work is an old neighbor by the name of Mobley, who was the original builder of the house 40 years ago.

The Fennings' summer home has the advantage of being within a few hours of Washington and at the same time restfully remote from the annoyances of city life. It is situated well back from the highway and has no telephone, so a vacation there means real peace and quiet. The Fennings have been at their country place off and on during the summer. Next month they may leave for a European trip, but their plans as to that are, so far, indefinite.

The Twentieth Century Club will open its season with a board meeting the last Thursday in September followed by the general session of the club the next Thursday, October 7.

Children of the Baptist Orphan Home in Bethesda have learned what it means to have people interested in their happiness and welfare and are eager to pass along the good they receive.

The other day, Miss Etta Mai Russell, the Toy Truck Lady, whose work is sponsored by the Federated Church Women, had some visitors at her office in the Juvenile Court Building, who looked just like Santa Claus when they arrived. They were two of the older boys from the Baptist Home, accompanied by their matron, Miss Mary N. Talmadge, and they came bringing two bushel baskets of toys.

The boys explained that the children in the home had learned of the Toy Truck and the playthings it brought to the boys and girls in the alleys when they would otherwise have none. "We have such a big playroom and lawn and such nice things to play with, we want to give some of them to children who don't have so much," the boys told Miss Russell.

The orphans at the Baptist Home began their interest in the alleys last Christmas when they "adopted" one for which to provide a tree and Christmas program. They strung ropes of popcorn, made from corn they had raised in their own garden last season, and decorated the tree. The children also provided the program in their adopted alley on Christmas Eve and again at the Easter season. While they are cared for by Sunday School classes in Baptist churches of the District who "adopt" them and see that Minnie has shoes or Johnnie has a new suit when necessity arises, they have found a way to do the same kind of thing for others less fortunate. Nothing gives them more pleasure than being able to do some giving themselves, says Miss Talmadge.

POM POM cannot exactly be classed as a member of the Women's City Club, but she certainly belongs. She is there more than are most of the members and feels a claim on the clubhouse no other individual would dare assert.

Moreover, Pom Pom is a perfect lady, discriminating in her tastes, independent of opinion and aloof—though courteous—of manner. She is the white Persian and maltese cat, belonging to Mrs. Margaret Hill, hostess at the club and a resident there for the past four years.

Every morning Pom Pom submits with dignity to having her face and paws washed, her coat well brushed and a fresh ribbon tied around her neck. She wears a red bow in the summer and green in the winter, but has little preference as to the color, having decided all are equally becoming with her snow white coat. About her coat she is particular, however. If she thinks her morning grooming has been insufficient, she frankly applies pink tongue to white fur and takes a bath in regular cat fashion. She is able to accomplish this, be it understood, with no loss of dignity.

She numbers distinguished members of Brookings Institution (next door) among her friends and sits in the front yard at the clubhouse to greet them as they pass in the morning. Some offer a word of greeting; others stop and stroke her soft white head. But, when the little dinner bell tinkles, a breakfast call, no matter who's going by, Pom Pom bounds into the house without a moment's delay. If her dignity ever suffers, it is at meal time and when she indulges in boxing matches. She delights in sitting up and boxing with her two front paws.

Club programs do not interest her. When club members gather for meetings, she walks into the hall, jumps to the bannister of the staircase and greets her friends by licking their hands when they pat her as they go by. Then a word: "Upstairs Pom Pom" and off she goes to Mrs. Hill's room where she has her own chair, one she selected in kittenhood as her particular property. There she curls up and sleeps peacefully while weighty discussions are carried on in the rooms below.

Pom Pom enjoys club life and recommends her version of it as far more agreeable and less strenuous than that which requires one to stay awake and participate in meetings.

Canadian Envoy and Wife Again Arrange Vacation

Marlers to Sail Wednesday on Normandie Unless Business Intervenes; Diplomatic Exodus Will Be Complete Next Week.

"Where and when," with emphasis on the when, is the theme song these days of diplomats who have not yet been away on a vacation. Most of the envoys, it's true, are out-of-town and have been since early summer, but there still are a few who have been kept here by business. However, one more week will see the diplomatic exodus practically completed.

The Canadian Minister and Lady Marler have been having a trying time, what with booking several passages only to have to cancel them. They had hoped to sail from Quebec earlier in the month, but something came up and they still are here. At present they are planning to leave on the Normandie Wednesday if nothing interferes, but their friends won't believe it until they're actually on the boat.

Charles Ritchie, third secretary of the legation, also is booked for the same liner. He is leaving for a vacation in England.

Next month will see the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun on the high seas bound for their homeland, leaving their young son and daughter here at school. They hope to go to Paris to visit another son before returning to Washington in two or three months.

Dmitri Naoumoff, Bulgarian Minister, who has seen practically all of the United States during the year and a half since his arrival, is leaving today for his country, which he has not visited since he came to Washington. He will be gone two months.

The Argentine Ambassador, Senor Don Felipe Espil, has been spending week-ends at his villa at Narragansett Pier all summer, but he is now there for a longer stay. He and the beautiful Senora de Espil, who is an American, the former Courtney Letts, of Washington, are among the most prominent members of the Rhode Island summer colony.

Rehoboth Beach, increasingly popular with members of Capital society, is the destination of the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen, who are leaving to spend two weeks there. Afterwards Frau Thomsen will go to Bluemont for a brief stay. She has been practically commuting between here and New York all summer, showing the sights of that city to visiting friends from Germany.

* * * *

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Aranha will entertain members of the embassy staff over the week-end at Ophir Hall, their country home near Leesburg.

* * * *

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito, who have been spending a few days in Washington will return today to their cottage at Hot Springs, Va.

* * * *

* * * *

The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, is in Washington from Hot Springs, where he is spending the summer, and will leave tomorrow for Syracuse, N. Y., to attend a Greek-American convention.

Signora Vitetti To Arrive Sept. 2

Formerly Natalie Mai Coe to Visit Her Parents at Oyster Bay.

Signora Leonardo Vitetti, the former Natalie Mai Coe, is expected to arrive in New York September 2 on the Rex, to visit her father, William R. Coe of Oyster Bay, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Coe will return to their estate that day from Wyoming.

The chief purpose of Signora Vitetti's visit is to be a member of the bridal party of Miss Lucile Theriot and Elisha Walker, jr., who will be married September 14 at the Creek Club. Mrs. Coe will entertain at a dinner-dance September 11 for the bridal couple at Planting Fields, her Long Island estate.

Signora Vitetti is the god-child of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, of Washington, and it is possible she may visit here before returning to Rome. Since her marriage to the Italian diplomat, Signora Vitetti has taken a prominent part in European society, and is a close friend of Edda Mussolini Ciano, daughter of Italy's dictator and wife of the Foreign Minister of that country.

Mrs. Samuel Edwards, of Seattle, Wash., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jacquelyn McCullough, to Ensign V. A. Sisler, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Sisler, of Washington, D. C. Ensign Sisler is stationed on the West Coast.

Though no definite date has been set for the wedding, Miss McCullough and her fiance are planning to be married sometime in the latter part of the autumn.

Miss O'Connell Engaged to Wed

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Connell, of New York and Shore Front Park, South Norwalk, Conn., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eileen Patricia O'Connell, to William Parker Rousseau, son of Mrs. Henry Harwood Rousseau, of New York and Blue Hill, Me., and the late Rear Admiral Rousseau. The family of the prospective bridegroom are well known in Washington, and Rear Admiral Rousseau had many friends here. Mrs. Rousseau is at present at her summer home at Blue Hill.

Miss O'Connell attended the Sacred Heart Convent in New York and the Sorbonne in Paris. Mr. Rousseau was graduated from the Lenox School and is with the advertising firm of Young and Rubicam.

Announcement of the engagement was made at a luncheon given by the parents of the bride-elect in the Viennese room of the St. Regis. The guests included Rear Admiral William E. Leahy, of Washington, Chief of Naval operations; Mrs. Rousseau, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron E. Conklin and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey W. Harper, of Larchmont, and Henry H. Rousseau, jr.

The wedding will take place in January.

Commissioner Paredes is a member of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs making a study of American-Philippine relations. As the committee will hold public hearings in Manila on September 15, other members of the committee have already sailed for Manila. Commissioner Paredes, however, remained in Washington to look after Philippine interests here while Congress is still in session. He hopes to reach Manila in time to participate in the deliberations of the committee.

Only The Sunday Post Offers These Features

A Critic Looks at Germany — Thomas Mann, Nobel prize winner, and Germany's foremost literary figure, has started a new publication in Switzerland as a vigorous proponent of "The True German Spirit." The publication is called "Standards and Values." Agnes E. Meyer has translated an absorbing article from the first issue for Post readers. It will appear on page 1, section 3, of The Sunday Post.

English, U. S. Poll Results — Will Wally and the Duke of Windsor return to England? The British Institute of Public Opinion has asked English people if they think the Duke and his Duchess should be invited to make their home in England. This poll is augmented by findings of the American Institute of Public Opinion on American sentiment regarding Citizens Committees, called Vigilantes, and a Nation-wide survey to determine the average hours of labor for American workmen.

Novel, Special Articles — The Sunday Post's summer reading special, a short-short story complete in one issue, is "Joe's Woman," a thrilling mystery story by Erika Zastrow. President Roosevelt will lead a delegation of distinguished Americans who will attend the 350th anniversary celebration of Sir Walter Raleigh's first attempt to colonize the New World at Roanoke Island, once part of the vast area known as Virginia. The Sunday Post will tell the historically famous story of this colonization and the story of Virginia Dare, the first white woman born in America.

New Foods Appealing At Parties

Recipes Suggested for Coconut Varities and Mintade.

By Rebekah Blake.

SUMMER isn't summer in Washington without garden parties—and this being the case, the clever hostess is always trying to please her guests. Whether these parties are formal or informal, it matters not, if the spirit of the occasion be gay and the refreshments refreshing and tempting.

Something new and different in beverages and sandwiches will give just the ending necessary for a successful party.

Even if you aren't planning a garden or porch party, friends will often drop in for a chat these days and it is wise to have on hand a beverage, sandwiches or cakes that can be easily served.

There are certain stand-bys that are always good for parties or unexpected guests. Beaten biscuits, cheese biscuits, lemonade, mint juleps and fruit punch will be appetizing and welcome at all times. Beaten biscuits, split and filled with roquefort cheese, will be a little more substantial than sweets or the ordinary sandwich. These served with mint juleps offer a refreshing combination.

Sandwiches for the garden party may be either plain or fancy, rolled or open-faced. Now that vegetables are so popular, you might try a vegetable sandwich of either radishes or cucumbers. Here is a recipe for "Cucumber and Almond Sandwiches:"

Chop cucumber fine, add a small amount of chopped green pepper, mix with an equal quantity of shredded almonds, moisten with mayonnaise and spread between thin slices of white or whole wheat bread. Cut in fancy shapes.

Sandwiches, containing lettuce, tomato or cucumber, are much more palatable when freshly made. It is often possible to carry the sliced bread and fillings and to assemble the sandwiches just before serving.

Your choice of cakes need not be limited for there are many varieties from which to choose. Butterscotch rolls, cocoanut vanities or ginger cakes might be the very cakes you have been seeking for your party. Following is a suggested recipe:

Cocoanut Vanities.

1 cup sugar
1 egg
2 cups soft wheat flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
Grated peel of 1 orange
¼ cup milk
½ cup orange juice
½ cup shredded cocoanut

Cream butter. Add sugar and egg and beat well. Add cocoanut. Sift flour, measure, add baking powder. Sift together. Add grated peel to orange juice. Add milk and orange juice alternately with flour to creamed mixture and cocoanut. Pour into shallow grease-lined pan. Top with meringue. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven. Cut into squares. Serve with fruit beverages or iced tea.

It is highly important that your beverages be cool, perfectly flavored. Now that beverages are being served everywhere it would be well if possible to select those that are a little different. Chocolate coffee punch might prove the very thing to give individuality and the essential "punch" to your party.

Fruit drinks always give the sensation of coolness. One way to heighten this coolness is to use a trace of mint or peppermint. Pour the oil into a teaspoon and then pour the oil from the spoon back into the bottle. This film which adheres to the spoon will impart an elusive coolness to an entire pitcher of beverage through which the spoon is stirred.

Chocolate Coffee Punch.

2 cups strong black coffee (cold)
¼ cup maple sirup
¼ cup chocolate sirup
1 cup whole milk

Or, 1 dipper of vanilla or chocolate ice cream

Combine all ingredients, add a few pieces of crushed ice and shake well in a cocktail shaker or glass coffee jar until the mixture is cold. Serve at once. This serves six. If ice cream is used, it is unnecessary to add ice.

Mintade.

2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup water
6 stalks fresh mint
½ cup grapefruit juice
2 cups ginger ale.

Remove the tips from the mint; crush stalks in hot sirup; let stand ½ hour; strain. Add fruit juices; chill. Add ginger ale just before serving. Use tips of mint as garnish.

These dainty cocoanut vanities, served with mintade, are ideal refreshments for a garden or porch party. The frequent, drop-in guest will find these delectable day or night. They are easily prepared.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

His Ten Years' Friendship for Girl Having Blossomed Into Love, Bachelor Asks How to Propose.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While vacationing in a nearby State some ten years ago, I met a girl just my own age who was visiting relatives there at the time. We met at a small party, with about eight or ten others present, and immediately I was attracted to her. Since that first meeting, I have seen her maybe half a dozen times, and we have corresponded regularly. She has always meant something pretty special to me.

* * * *

Anyway, earlier this summer I had word from her that she was going on a two weeks' cruise and would be disembarking at New York City on a certain date, if I cared to meet her there. The prospect delighted me, and I told her so, for I hadn't seen her since 1935. (Understand, I had gone with many other girls during the years since I first met her; and at one time thought I was in love with a certain girl, but the affair tapered off and is now a closed book.)

* * * *

Well, I went to New York to meet her; arrived a day ahead; and was waiting with impatience as the boat finally docked. To my surprise, as I waited for her to get through the customs, which took nearly an hour, I thought I'd go crazy with suspense. We did the New York night spots and had a wonderful time and left the big town the following afternoon on the same train—she to change trains at Philadelphia and I to come on to Washington.

I can't tell you how blue I've been since that week-end. She has another week's vacation coming and I would like nothing better than to have her spend it here, where she has relatives; or with my family. How should I go about inviting her? Should my mother write her, or should I? Also, I would like to go to visit her. How should I go about that? I know now that I love her more than anything in the world. How can I tell her so and make her understand? Before parting, we made arrangeemnts to take in the Army-Navy football game together this fall; but now I know I can't wait that long to see her again. Give me your best advice.

Acceptable Procedure.

DEAR BACHELOR: If you want the girl to visit your family, you must persuade your mother to write her a cordial invitation to come. If your mother hasn't met her, she should salute her as "Dear Miss Blank" and ask her to spend the last week of her vacation in your home on the theory that you have talked so much about her and praised her so highly that the whole family is eager to meet her. You may write her separately, urging her to accept your mother's invitation, or you may enclose your letter in the same envelope with your mother's note.

* * * *

If the girl is winding up her vacation in August, and you think there is any chance of persuading her to visit here, you can well afford to postpone plans for visiting her until later. However, if she decides not to come and regrets your mother's invitation, you might as well start right now making plans for visiting her. There's no reason why you should attempt to conceal your ardor if you are deeply in love with her. The bolder your courtship, the better your chances of winning her.

* * * *

Write or telephone her and say you've got to see her again; that the football game is too far in the future. Ask her if it's convenient for you to come a certain week-end, naming the date you have in mind. If she says yes, ask her the name of a good hotel, saying you wish to make reservations in advance. She may insist on your staying at her parents' home. If she doesn't, you'll have to put up elsewhere; but even so, you're still visiting her.

* * * *

Invent your own ways of telling the girl you love her. I think the simple words, "I love you," would do as well as any others. You might also add, "I'm crazy about you; I can't live without you; I can't think of anyone or anything but you. I've been a fool these past ten years not to realize it. When will you marry me?" etc., etc. Don't expect to win your suit in a day or a week. Should she turn you down at first, keep hammering away with letters, telephone calls, visits, gifts, etc., until she either accepts you and names the wedding day or tells you positively that there is no hope. M. H.

Drinking Water.

Beer is served generally around 42 degrees, wine at room temperature. How cold should drinking water be?

The amount of drinking water you use depends on what you are doing and so should the temperature. The more work you do, the more water you need, and the more you drink the less cold it should be, so long as it isn't too warm.

The English regard the American habit of using "ice water" with horror. But then the English haven't got our climate to deal with. We always used to be warned when young against drinking very cold water after becoming overheated from heavy work or violent exercise. This warning should be kept in circulation. Water below 45 degrees may cause cramps, chills, upset stomach and mild shock.

Water above 55 degrees is neither refreshing nor appetizing. Within the range of 45 to 55 then is the safe one, and neither tap water nor ice water come within it.

"A minimum of six to eight glasses of water each day is considered an absolute minimum for preservation of health. Factory workers, athletes and others require nearly four times as much, or almost 200 ounces; office workers can get along with approximately 50 ounces a day, or little more than six glasses.

"Temperature of water should vary from 45 degrees, to be served with dinner; to 55 degrees, to be served while working or engaging in golf, tennis or other physical activity. Water for schools should be furnished at a temperature between 50 and 55 degrees for hotels at a temperature of 50 degrees and for restaurants and cafeterias at a temperature of between 45 and 50 degrees.

"An adequate supply of drinking water should encourage people to drink enough water for their own health. In workrooms, factories and offices it should be maintained at a constantly correct temperature, it should be conveniently located and it should provide every safeguard against contamination and dirt."

For the heavy outdoor worker who sweats profusely, it is found a little salt with the water helps to prevent tiredness; even in hot weather it is relished.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 13.

SOMEHOW, this is the time of year when the "prettiest girls" are selected—either on the block, on a strip of hot sand, or at a summer resort—and the culls and rejects rage or moan.

ALICE HUGHES.

I don't exactly lie awake nights waiting for the election of Newport's leading glamor maiden of the season, but I always eat better when the suspense is over, and the new queen of love and beauty is chosen. Last summer she was shapely Eleanor Young, whose debut last year at the rented Astor castle (complete with velvet footmen) was chattered about until Marsyl Stokes' coming out THIS summer. Yes, the girl with the prettily odd name gets the crown this year as Newport's ace glamorette, and her party was said, by returning survivors, to have been something out of imperial Rome. La Belle Marsyl is tall, tasty and quite worthy of being the top girl of the "set."

Dashing over to Saratoga, we find to our great relief that its prize lass of the race month is Janet Olcott, 19-year-old daughter of the late Irish tenor, who sounded his high C's on every stage of the land for many years in romantic, Gaelic plays. Not only did Jane win the prize this year, but she also got formally engaged to the sweetie of her childhood, another Norseman named Bill Sullivan. This set all the romantic souls of her crowd into the dithering vapors, and made everything just too sweet.

Well, things are now on the mend. We have Miss Newport and Miss Saratoga all picked. When I learn the identity of Miss Coney Island, '37, I can take an aspirin and get back to serious work again!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, now that Friday the 13th is over, did you walk under that ladder, and if so, what fell? . . .

There's no two or three ways about it—we raise them tough here. It's something about a big, brawling city, I suppose. At any rate, I present Kenneth Golden, aged 20 months, as a survivor of the fittest. Master Golden, the other afternoon, climbed onto a chair in his kitchen, pushed open a window screen and fell four stories. An ambulance rushed the infant to the hospital, where X-rays were taken and the medicos said he had every chance to pull through. That is what I call a baby! . . .

* * * *

The town's girls are said to be rushing back from beaches, hills and dales, for a tall, dark and handsome Austrian prince has just arrived in town—probably to make an inspection. He is Franz Hohenlohe, son of Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, who has a schloss just outside Salzburg, where the music plays and the ski suits come from. He is "eligible," stopping at the Waldorf, and there are the raw materials for another of those Sunday-supplement marriages . . .

* * * *

Now the foster papa of two, our late mayor, Jimmy Walker, and his pretty wife, Betty Compton, have been living quietly on their small estate at Northport, L. I., all summer, playing with the newer baby and weeding the garden. In spite of the fact that we face the darndest mayoralty contest in years, dapper James, young for all his 50-odd, keeps resolutely out of politics. After his troubles he is happiest among his babies and begonias. And very smart of James, too . . .

Button-Up Tulips Will Adorn Walls

Surrealist tulips that button up the front, violins that grow on vines, red Ming horses on a silver ground, bouquets of knives, forks, spoons—these are just a few of the amazing patterns found in novelty wall papers this season.

One, especially appropriate for bars and playrooms, has been dubbed "Tattoo." An ingenious artist collected the most popular half dozen or so tattoo patterns and made them into a wallpaper design. "There's "Queenie," the provocative mermaid; two hearts pierced with a single arrow; Miss America waving a flag and carrying a star-spangled shield; two sailors doing a jig; "Glory," a sailboat, and numbers of others.

Canning Recipe May Win Cash In Post Contest

NOW is the time to think about your winter canning while there is an ample supply of peaches, apples, grapes and melons on the market. These fruits are reasonably priced. Perhaps your recipes for jellies or preserves are especially delicious and successful. If so give the public the benefit of your knowledge by entering it in The Post recipe contest for this week.

Besides, you may win one of the five cash prizes offered. First prize is $3, second prize $2 and third prize $1. The fourth and fifth prizes are $1 each.

Your recipe for jam peach preserves, peach marmalade, grape preserves, watermelon rind preserves, apple jelly, apple butter or preserves made from other fruits may be the very thing to win a prize and give some housewife just the information she has been seeking.

Copy your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so that it will reach her before noon Saturday.

Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT'S EASY enough to cock an eye at a neighbor's house and see at a glance just what's the matter with it. But when it's your own, you live so closely to your furniture that it's difficult to get a disinterested prespective on it.

A reader, faced with the problem of deciding on new wall colors, says that her things are so much a part of her daily routine that she can't make up her mind about the changes needed. Her furniture is rather modern, but not coldly impersonal in appearance. The living room has a plum-colored broadloom carpet and the sofa is in amethyrt velvet. Two semi-circular love seats are covered in peacock blue corduroy and the draperies are light satin edged in cording of peacock blue. Lamps of white with white porcelain figurine bases and a white coffee table provide accent, and a 10-foot mural in sepia on one wall completes the color theme in the living room. It has a north exposure and at present the walls are in a grayish lavender, but she wants something quite different and asks our advice as to the tone.

On paper that room sounds as though there were too many cold colors in it. But if we saw it we might find that they were so balanced that the effect would be quite all right. However, generally speaking, a north room is likely to be gloomy with too many grayish tones used with blues and lavenders.

Vacation Time's Camera Time; Take Pictures Worth Saving

You may value "hit-or-miss" shots for sentiment's sake or "for the record." But with a few dos' or don'ts to guide you, your pictures can be exciting, beautiful, warm with human interest, prized for themselves alone.

Bob's pot shot of Jean's dog will not interest even Rover's admirers. Rover's head will look too large, he'll squint painfully and his outlines will be fuzzy.

By taking Rover on a level with the camera his proportions in the photograph will be right. By turning him for a three-quarter view he'll not have to squint directly into the sun. To be sure the outlines will be sharp and clear, it's better (for an exposure of more than 1-25 second) to steady the camera on a box or other firm base.

In snapping views of vacation spots, remember these pointers: (1) Have one main object of interest, such as a bridge or tree. (2) Have that main object above or below or to one side of the center, never directly at the center. (3) Put the horizon one-third from the bottom or top, never cutting your picture in halves.

If you're shooting a picnic or camping ground, don't line them up in rows. Have them doing something—spreading out the lunch, or wading in the stream.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Successful Amateur Photography," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

D.C. Navy Reserve Starts Trip Today

Bound for a 14-day training cruise, the Second Fleet Division of the First Battalion, United States Naval Reserve, will leave the Navy Yard this morning aboard the destroyer U. S. S. Badger.

One of a squadron of destroyers carrying reservists from East Coast cities, the Badger is en route to Caribbean Waters for battle and short-range firing practice, before reaching St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, next Thursday. After leave, the citizen sailors will re-embark Sunday for the homeward trip, undergoing ship-handling maneuvers and emergency drills on the way.

The Second Division, composed of 88 Washington men, is the only one of the three local reserve outfits which will cruise in foreign waters this year. The First and Third Divisions, sailing early in September, will cruise up the Atlantic Coast to Boston, the probable liberty port.

Youth Found Guilty in Auto Death of Boy

New Bans on Parking, More 1-Way Streets Sought for D. C.

A coroner's jury ruled that Spencer B. Lee, 19, of Cabin John, Md., was guilty of negligent homicide in the traffic death Monday of 6-year-old Albert A. Tully, and ordered him held for action of the Police Court.

Albert's companion, John Shelton Young, 7, of 5327 Forty-second street, and Catherine Anderson, 14, of 5337 Forty-second street, key witnesses at the hearing, told how they had watched the boy start across the street and step from behind a parked car into the path of Lee's automobile.

In a voluntary statement to the jury, Lee stated he had not seen the boy until the moment of impact. He was charged under the negligent homicide act and released in $1,000 bond.

Albert died at Georgetown University Hospital of a crushed chest and other injuries shortly after the accident, which occurred at the intersection of Forty-second street and Military road, a block from his home at 5341 Forty-second street. His father, James F. Tully, is employed by the Social Security Board, division of claims.

Lillian Wilkerson, 19, of 1522 V street southeast, suffered a fractured skull and possible internal injuries last night when she was struck by a truck in the 2200 block of First street northwest. She was taken to Casualty Hospital.

The driver of the truck, Grafton M. Lewis, colored, of the first block Pierce street northwest, swerved his car and struck a tree in trying to avoid hitting the girl. He was unhurt.

Esther Peason, colored, 8 of the 300 block Third street southeast, suffered a possible skull fracture yesterday when she was struck by an automobile driven by Fred Summers, 41, of Baltimore, in front of her home. She was taken to Providence Hospital.

Meanwhile widespread changes in traffic administration and control will be recommended by Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, in a forthcoming report to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, it was learned last night.

Designed to expedite rush-hour traffic movements, reduce accidents and curb the city's rising casualty toll, Inspector Holmes' recommendations will include drastic parking restrictions, additional one-way streets and important changes at principal downtown circles.

Although complete details of the report were withheld pending Major Brown's return from vacation Monday, it was learned Inspector Homes will suggest engineering as well as administrative and enforcement innovations.

District highway officials have long advocated a tunnel for street cars beneath Dupont Circle. Inspector Holmes, it was reported, will seek an immediate remedy at this hazardous point by urging new tracks around the east side of the circle, permitting street cars to travel with rather than against vehicular traffic.

Seeks New Traffic Lights.

His recommendations also will include new traffic signal lights and "stop" signs at various intersections throughout the city. A recent survey by The Post revealed at least 100 illegible "stop" signs awaiting replacement.

The report will list several downtown "danger points" where parked cars retard the safe flow of rush-hour traffic. Parking prohibitions will be suggested on these streets to provide greater safety for pedestrians and permit a swifter flow of vehicles.

In line with present efforts to bring Washington a new highway safety record for 1937, Inspector Holmes will urge a continuing policy of strict law enforcement. His report will contain requests for additional policemen assigned to traffic duty.

Lack of adequate police personnel to cope with current traffic problems was blamed by Inspector Holmes for increasing recklessness on District streets.

Urges Investigation Squads.

He struck particularly at intersections where high hedges and trees obstruct motorists' vision, and said he would recommend special regulations requiring property owners to keep these corners free of overhanging limbs and tall bushes.

To determine accident causes properly, Inspector Holmes will include in his report a request for adequately trained traffic investigation squads—similar to those in other cities now operating under the "Kreml system."

The Traffic Department yesterday reported a sharp increase in the number of accidents from January 1 to August 1 of this year, as compared to the same period for 1936.

During the seven-month period this year 7,551 accidents were reported, as against 5,607 last year. Injuries during that time jumped from 2,254 in 1936 to 2,794 this year.

Hearings Open Monday On District Racing Bill

Hearings on a bill to legalize horse racing in the District of Columbia will be opened Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the offices of the Senate District Committee, it was announced yesterday by Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina.

Senator Reynolds is chairman of a special sub-committee to which the bill was referred. Other members are Senators Millard Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Athur Capper (Republican), Kansas. A similar bill precipitated a furious controversy in the House District Committee. It finally was pigeonholed.

Men and women, some of whom had not seen each other for 20 years, spent the afternoon playing the games they had enjoyed as boys and girls.

A highlight of the day was a baseball game between the old-timers and the youths who frequent the playground now. The "graduates" claimed a victory of 13-12 and Umpire Leonard Ross, of the Department of Playgrounds, took their word for it. The game was characterized by a careless disregard of rules, however, so it was pretty hard to tell who came out on top.

The women attending the reunion proved they had not forgotten the sports of their girlhood by playing a round of schlag, a German ball game which was introduced to Washington while they were in school here. Nobody even bothered to keep score in this event.

Those who did not take part in the games gathered under the trees and exchanged notes on the years which have intervened since they last met. Firemen and policemen, nurses and teachers—all were there.

Three of the most enthusiastic participants in the reunion were the Rev. Francis Cowhig and the Rev. Francis Cornell of the Catholic priesthood, and the Rev. Elmore Kimball, a Methodist minister. Father Cornell is pastor of St. Patrick's Church in Baltimore, and Mr. Kimball is serving as guest preacher in Methodist churches here for the summer.

Eight of those attending liked Garfield so much that they went into playground work when they grew up. Miss Grace Davis and Ben Zola are now assistants at their alma mater. Miss Frances Kessler is director of Burroughs Playground. Miss Dorothy Kelso is activities secretary for the Playground Department, and Miss Loveye Atkins is a department tennis instructor. Miss Rena Burman is employed as an assistant at Virginia Avenue and Herman Riley at Georgetown. Carroll Rankin is connected with the Baltimore playground system.

In the group were about 20 Garfield "parents," many of whom are now grandparents. They have moved from the southeast section since their children played at Garfield and took advantage of this opportunity to stage a reunion of their own.

The third generation was represented by some 30 children whose parents are alumni of the playground. The largest family was that of Mrs. Gladys Brown Belt, who had with her, Mary Ellen, Bobby, Walter and Patsy Belt.

Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, Miss Maud Parker and Richard Tennyson, all three of whom have served as directors of the playground, joined their former charges for the day. Mrs. Sheridan is the present director, Miss Parker served from 1916 to 1923 and Tennyson was there in 1915. He is now assistant director of the Playground Department and Miss Parker is director of girls' and women's activities.

Senate Votes Army, Navy $31,000,000

D. C. Projects Included; Fort Myer to Get $284,500.

Bills authorizing expenditures of $31,000,000 for barracks and other buildings for the Army and Navy passed the Senate yesterday.

As amended, the bill authorizes construction of an Air Corps technical school at Denver, Colo., and barracks at various stations throughout the United States.

Other approved projects include: Fort Myer, Va., $55,000 for new barracks, and $220,000 for two additions to present living quarters for the enlisted personnel of the four Cavalry troops of the post. A $9,000 hospital addition is contemplated and $500 earmarked for extension of telephone facilities.

A new reproduction building for drawing, copying and filing maps would be provided at Fort Humphreys, D. C., to replace a temporary wartime structure, at a cost of $74,000, with an additional $3,500 for telephone facilities.

Officers' Quarters.

The measure authorizing expenditures at two score army posts in the continental United States, the Panama Canal Zone, and Hawaii, had already passed the House carrying a total of $21,460,688. Other projects were added by the Senate, boosting the expenditures authorized to $25,587,456. The bill has been returned to the House for consideration of the amendments.

The Navy bill approved yesterday authorizes a $6,099,057 program of public works at naval shore establishments. In approving the measure the Senate eliminated a proposed $16,000,000 naval supply depot at Oakland, Calif., and substituted marine barracks and other construction at Parris Island, S. C., costing approximately $2,000,000. The measure has not yet been considered by the House.

Meets "Urgent" Needs.

Part of a $162,000,000 building and rehabilitation program, the Army measure passed yesterday by the Senate will meet the "most urgent" needs of the land forces. A similar measure had previously been passed by the Senate, but has not yet received House consideration.

The bill also authorizes the following expenditures: Chanute Field, Ill., $2,000,000; Army and Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark., $35,000; Fort Bragg, N. C., $413,500; Carlisle Barracks, Pa., $761,500; Fort Dupont, Del., $413,500.

Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., $257,500; Madison Barracks, N. Y., $359,500; Fort McPherson, . . $108,000; Fort Monmouth, N. J., $377,500.

S. C. Hamilton Will Head U.S. Dentists' Group

Named President for 1938 at Convention Here of Colored Association.

Other officers selected by the nominating committee for the coming year included Dr. Waldo Howard, Houston, Tex., vice president; Dr. S. V. Smith, of Philadelphia, assistant secretary, and Dr. J. Leroy Baxter, Orange, N. J.; Dr. Cyril A. Absolom, New York City, and Dr. A. B. Cooper, Atlanta, Ga., members of the executive board.

Five regional vice presidents named included Dr. F. L. Harper, of Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. Frank Sykes, of Decatur, Ala.; Dr. W. M. Springer, of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. P. W. Hill, of Clarksdale, Miss., and Dr. J. M. Tinsley, of Richmond, Va.

President of the group, Dr. Jackson L. Davis, suggested the association do all in its power to get more colored dentists on the school, clinic and hospital staffs.

He then turned the meeting over to the incoming president, Dr. R. E. Beaman, of Cincinnati, who next year will be succeeded by Dr. Hamilton.

Principal speakers yesterday were Dr. Isador Hirschfield, D. D. S., associate professor of periodontology at Columbia University, and Dr. George M. Anderson, of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery.

Dr. Beamon appointed the following chairmen: National program committee, Dr. M. D. Wiseman, Washington; publicity committee, Dr. Roscoe C. Brown, Washington; public relations committee, Dr. Leroy Baxter, Orange, N. J.; National Dental Association Journal, Dr. R. S. Thompson, Westfield, N. J.; dental health week, Dr. D. H. Turpin, Nashville, Tenn.; research and progress committee, Dr. William Madison, Washington; director of exhibits, Dr. Fleming Norris, East Paterson, N. J.; educational extension, Dean Russell A. Dixon, Howard University, and Dr. J. B. Parks, Newark, N. J., to represent the National Dental Association at the World's Fair in New York.

Senate Confirms Furlong

Rear Admiral William Rea Furlong, U. S. N., was confirmed yesterday by the Senate as chief of the Bureau of Ordnance. He will succeed Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark, U. S. N., who has been ordered to duty as commander, cruiser division 3, battle force.

Barney Neighborhood House Closes Season With Pageant

30 Children Take Part in Colorful Fairy Playlet; 50 Receive Prizes for Work During Vacation Session.

A holiday spirit ruled at Barney Neighborhood House, 420 N street southwest, last night as 200 children and their guests joined in a round of musical entertainment and award of prizes to close the six-week vacation school program.

More than 50 children received prizes for attendance, excellence in craft work and sportsmanship from Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, president of the house board of trustees for 15 years.

In turn, Mrs. Carr received the first prize of the evening—a large shawl woven on the house looms and presented by the children as a farewell gift. Mrs. Carr, whose husband recently was appointed Minister to Czechoslovakia, is to leave for Europe late this month.

The musical program, originally scheduled outdoors, was driven indoors by rain. Songs by the kindergarten and selections by the boys' and girls' rhythm bands introduced the featured attraction, a musical romance, "The Nightingale and the Rose," written by Dorothy Wright, staff musical director.

30 Appear in Cast.

A cast of nearly 30 wove a fabrick of song and dance around the love of Rose Corrado, 12, the beautiful princess, and Peyton Curtis, 14, wandering knight from a distant country. Their path to love was literally strewn with white roses, but the princess demanded a red, red rose as the price of her hand. After Knight Rupert had searched far and wide for a red rose, a courageous nightingale, Dotty Tippett, 11, gave her heart's blood to dye a white rose red, and clear the way to a happy ending.

Twelve Reserve Prizes.

Twelve members of the House Boys Club received scholarships for two-week vacations at Camp Reeder, Mount Victoria, Md., for skill in craft work and sportsmanship. They were Peyton Curtis, and his brother, Dickie Curtis, 10, both of 1100 Robinson street southwest; Earl Polen, 11, and Raymond Polen, 8, 1347 Fourth street southwest; Michael Corrado, 10, 902 Sixth street southwest; Edgar Poore, 10, 53 S street northwest; Pat Hicks, 13, 1344 Fourth street southwest; Raymond Penn, 12, 324 McLean avenue southwest; Woodrow Peter, 14, 1325 Fourth street southwest; George Charuhas, 10, 419 O street southwest; John Lohman, 14, and Leonard Lohman, 12, 1316 Fourth street southwest.

Boy's Skull Fractured In Tumble Off Porch

Mrs. Ruth Miller, the child's mother, rushed him to the hospital where his condition was described as serious.

Veterans Here Oppose Aliens In Public Office

Army and Navy Union Demands Preference for Ex-Service Men.

"Effective preference to former service men in employment on all public positions, Federal, State, county and municipal," was urged yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Army and Navy Union, now holding its forty-eighth annual national encampment at the Willard Hotel.

Adoption of the resolution followed a report signed by E. Claude Babcock, national employment officer of the union and former secretary of the Civil Service Commission.

The resolution recommended that aliens not be given employment in public agencies and urged employment for all disabled veterans or 100 per cent compensation.

It was also recommended that the Government obtain and maintain statistics on the employment of former service men by agencies so that those appointing officers who discriminate against veterans may be known.

C. John Russell, employe of the Social Security Board here, is slated to be elected national commander of the union today when the organization holds its election of officers. Russell is now senior vice commander of the union and a former national publicity officer of the American Legion.

Senate Committee Asks Consolidation Of Crime Agencies

Recommendation that investigating agencies of the Federal Government be consolidated in a single bureau was made yesterday by the Senate's Crime Committee.

The committee, which urged an aroused public opinion to curb law violations, asserted it had found "a general conviction that there had been a breakdown in our law enforcement and the courts."

As recommended by the committee, the consolidation would involve the F. B. I. here, under J. Edgar Hoover. The committee made no suggestion as to which agency should control the proposed new bureau.

The committee pointed out that, in addition to the F. B. I., separate investigating agencies are maintained by the Postoffice, the Narcotic Bureau, the Customs Bureau, the Coast Guard and several other Government departments.

Filmusical Is A Fast-Moving Hit at Capitol

"YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gregory Ratoff, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen and Karl Tunberg, with music by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel. Featuring Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Charles Winninger, the Ritz Brothers, Louise Hovick, Rubinoff and his violin, Tony Martin, Tip Tap and Toe, Inez Polange and Joan Davis. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris at Loew's Capitol.

Amusement content of "You Can't Have Everything" is a flat contradiction of its title. This giant production has everything and everybody that could be crammed into one Hollywood musical.

Starting right off in "high" at an amazing pace, this show immediately commands audience enthusiasm. It is true that later on the action is slowed up by some stiff grades and lack of power, but most of the time the show rolls along like a demonstration car.

Three personality elements contribute most strongly to the show's success—Don Ameche, Alice Faye and the Ritz brothers. Senor Ameche is fast becoming one of the most effervescent of screen playboys. No accident this, for the young Latin can really act. Alice Faye has a new piquancy and artful innocence. She is by way of becoming a real actress instead of just a pretty-pretty warbler. The Ritz brothers offer undiluted insanity in satisfying doses; are best as flirting with, and later impersonating, three aged charwomen.

The advent of Gypsy Rose Lee as Louise Hovick, dramatic actress, will interest many. The quondam burlesque darling is beautiful and excels in strutting about laden with silver fox and ermine. But she is neither dramatic nor an actress. True, she has a mean part, but that should be no handicap to a siren of the first water. Also, she must be about 6 feet tall, since she dwarfs every man in the show. Slightly disappointing, too, was Rubinoff, whom the screen seems to have robbed of the magnetic quality he exudes in person. But this may have been because of unfortunate photography and because he and his violin didn't have quite enough to do.

Has Real Story.

There is a story to "You Can't Have Everything," and a cute yarn, at that. Alice Faye plays a granddaughter of Edgar Allan Poes, who is determined to win fame in letters as a playwrght. She writes a gruesome thing called "North Winds," in which all the characters freeze to death. Don Ameche, a liquor-guzzling writer of real Broadway hits, out of the kindness of his heart, sees that she is paid a couple of hundred dollars for an option on her play, and then persuades her to go into a musical comedy. His sweetie, Gypsy R—, we mean Louise Hovick, gets terrifically jealous and the action resolves itself into a merry-go-round of everyone giving the run-around to everyone else. One of the nicest things about the story is the way it gives the little Faye a chance to be pathetically hungary and amusingly highbrow.

Nice old Charles Winninger is at his genial best as a Manhattan play producer, and a clever little trouper, Phyllis Brooks, comparatively new to the screen and pretty as paint, offers much promise in a meanie of a part.

There are big specialty moments by the dozen, but one of the best was the tap dancing of Tip, Tap and Toe, comically rigged out as Haille Selassie and two of his aides, as they were in George White's "Scandals," at the National.

The Gordon and Revel music has a grand sparkle throughout. But you are likely to remember most happily "I'm Afraid to Dream" and "Danger, Love at Work."

Dorsey Clicks on Stage.

Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra offer some of the niftiest swing music heard recently, their tops being a hot rhythmed version of "The Flight of the Bumble Bee.' The acrobatic dancing of Freda Sullivan and splendid songs by young Bob Ederle enrich the program. But the real show-stopper of the act is a 300-pound colored girl, Lou Richman, who had the audience in stitches.

Ward Wilson, of the radio, offers impersonations climaxed not too fortunately by one of the President. Sylvia and Clemence have a tomboy acrobatic act that could stand some soap. Frances and Lapell present colorful aerial stunts.

Columbia

Signalizing its third week on F street, "Saratoga," Jean Harlow's last picture, in which Clark Gable is co-star, opened a week's engagement at Loews Columbia Theater yesterday as chief feature of the screen bill.

"Saratoga," as must be known to all by now, has the country's leading race tracks and breeding farms for The elaborate racing plants that thoroughbreds as its background. play a prominent part in the development of the picture's spirited action are actually the most famous race courses in America. One sees the plant from which the picture derives its name, Chicago's most favored merry-go-round and Miami's.

This, however, is less important than the fact that "Saratoga" visualizes a story that is fast-moving and interesting, alive with comedy and marked by frequent thrilling climaxes. It also is extremely well played, in exactly the proper tempo for such a piece, by a cast that boasts two of the cinema's most popular stars—one never to be seen again.

Jean Harlow is as attractive and as capable in this subject as ever she was, and Clark Gable is perfectly cast in the robust role of the "king of the bookmakers," who indulges in a bit of clandestine romance while booking his enormous bets. Cliff ("Ukelele Ike") Edwards —and he has his uke along this trip—is Gable's amusing sheetwriter. Other valuable roles are played in the comedy key by Frank Morgan and Una Merkel, with Lionel Barrymore again contributing one of his fine impersonations of an irascible old man, a horse-breeder, who thinks only in terms of horseflesh. Walter Pidgeon also is among those worthy of a word of praise, as is Hattie McDaniels, cast as Miss Harlow's ebony maid.

The bill at the Columbia—not that it matters in this case—is completed by the usual array of short subjects and the picturized "Events of the Day."

"MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Clarence Budington Kelland, adapted to the screen by William Wister Haines and Elaine Ryan. Featuring Kenny Baker, Frank McHugh, Alice Brady, Gertrude Michael and Jane Wyman, with John Eldredge, Henry O'Neill, Harry Davenport, Ferris Taylor and Linda Perry. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle.

The surprise of this picture is Kenny Baker, the youthful singer of Jack Benny's radio hour, who also has made local stage appearances, cast in the title role.

There never was any question of the ingratiating quality of the Baker voice as it came into the loudspeakers, but when he appeared in person in the Capital as a featured vaudeville artist the impression was given his audiences that he was an extremely young lad who had not as yet gained the poise or the stage presence to suggest that he might be an actor of parts. That completely erroneous idea is dispelled by his present assignment.

In "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," the youthful Mr. Baker not only sings delightfully but impersonates a slightly abashed youngster who can not quite fathom all the adulation that is showered upon him after a successful radio appearance and a sudden skyrocketing to fame as the country's foremost crooner, and misconstrues most of it. We discover him first as a small-town electrician, tinkering with the wiring for an al fresco strawberry festival. When his turn comes on the program, he slips on a coat, mounts the rostrum and reveals a deep barytone voice that captures the interest of a mattress tycoon as a perfect organ for the rendition of soothing lullabies that will enhance the vogue of his overstuffed aids to slumber. He engages the lad on the spot at a ridiculously low salary—just as he is coming down with an attack of the quinsy. After a throat operation, Master Claude Dodd is ordered not to sing until the night of his first New York broadcast—when he turns out to be a high tenor!

Swamped With Women.

Mr. Hiram P. Doremus, the mattress man, is outraged by this apparent hoax—until the telegrams begin to pour in acclaiming Dodd the hit of the year. From that point on the story assumes serio-comic proportions that will be found sufficiently ample to appeal to virtually any amusement taste. Mr. Dodd meets a thoroughly nice girl in the studio, but cannot grasp the honesty or the depth of her affection. Falling into the clutches of a society racketeer, who wishes to secure possession of a radio invention he has perfected, he almost is swept off his feet. Mme. Morro, the great operatic star, only misses marrying him by the proverbial eyelash. And so it goes, until the kid makes up his mind that the small town of his origin is the proper place for him after all. What happens after he gets back there and again is tinkering with the lights for what Mme. Morro terms another strawberry fiesta provides one of the definite "kicks" of the picture.

Kenny Baker is not "the whole show" as these casual remarks might seem to imply. He is, on the contrary, the beneficiary of excellent support by a cast of adroit selection. Pert little Jane Wyman is the real "heart interest" in the story and fully justifies her elevation to a more important role than she has heretofore played. The blonde and icy Getrude Michael is the socialite, Jessica, and teams with John Eldredge in the narrative's mild villainy. Frank McHugh, as "Sniffer," Dodd's self-appointed manager, turns in a performance that adds to the play's amusing qualities and Alice Brady outdoes herself in the noisy and unmannered role of Mme. Morro, the temperamental prima donan. Minor roles are effectively played.

Next to Kenny Baker, this Mervyn LeRoy production's chief asset seems to be that the canny Mr. LeRoy has caught an even blend of a wide variety of elements of entertainment that add up to a uniformly interesting and enjoyable picture.

Robinson Tops Stage Bill.

The four acts of vaudeville comprising the stage bill also are well balanced. The living program is opened by Louise and Stafford in a dance revue that is lent an added flavor by the agreeable singing of Lillian Dawson, both in solos and as a background for some of her principals' intricate dance routines. Next come the Ben Yost Varsity Coeds, six attractive young women, whose voices blend perfectly in a cycle of popular and well-arranged melodies. The Three Swifts, those incomparable English Indian club juggles seen so often on local stages, are in the third spot and repeat the hit they always score with Capital audiences.

The headliner for the week is that peer of all tap dancers, Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, who intersperses his "hoofing"—and it is too good for any such plebian designation—with intermittent monologues that are refreshing in their humor and to be applauded for their absolute cleanliness. Artists do not have to be "smutty," and Bill is an artist. His reception at the hands of yesterday afternoon's capacity crowd amounted to an ovation—and one which he accepted modestly, as always.

An E. M. Newman natural color film of the "Land of Magyar," a Popeye cartoon comedy, "I Never Changes My Altitude," and the Paramount News are the supplementaries of a program that rates in the top brackets.

Palace

Profoundly moving in its poignant human story, illuminating in its farflung exposition of Chinese life and mammoth in its physical proportions, "The Good Earth" will continue to enthrall all who see it through a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

There has been caught in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Pearl S. Buck, for many years a resident in China, something of the universality, the fundamental soundness and the sweep the author contrived to impart to the original work, a novel that not only traced the history of a family of lowly farmers that reached high places, but told the story of triumph, defeat, joy and tragedy of the whole human race in that skillful tracery. There is an epic quality in "The Good Earth" that the cinema has apprehended where the living stage, restricted by its four narrow walls, could only suggest the majestic dimensions of the drama spread on the printed pages of the book.

To the visible creation of the pivotal characters in the story, Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, both winners of filmdom's highest honors for screen acting last year, bring a complete equipment. In lines and action, Mr. Muni's is by far the "larger" role of the two. His Wang Lung is the dominant head of the household he raises from penury to affluence. But by the simplicity and pathos of her impersonation of the role of O-Lan, his patient wife, Miss Rainer achieves an equal effect of intense and inescapable realism. With only a few lines to speak, she accomplishes by the true art of acting a complete and rounded study of the symbol of womanly forbearance in the play.

There are others in the cast, too, who contribute generously to the power and conviction of "The Good Earth." Among the supporting players are such able actors as Walter Connolly, as the indolent uncle; Charles Grapewin, as the father; Jessie Ralph, as the mistress of the "Big House," and Tillie Losch, who makes a vivid picture as the dancing girl who temporarily disrupts Wang's home. Many others do their full share in emphasizing the breadth of scope of the material placed at their disposal. N. B. B.

Their Run Is Extended at Palace

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 13. — I wonder how many of you are becoming more than a little bit weary—as I am—of the "great lover" hokum that has been built up around Robert Taylor?

I like Bob, personally. He impresses me as being a sincere, clean-minded down-to-earth kid who inclines more to shyness than to egotism. Without being a good—or even a fair—actor, he is an appealing screen personality. But—a great lover? Shucks, Bob is no more a Casanova than any other small-town college boy, and I think the mawkish publicity stories which present him as every woman's dream-man are going to drive him from the screen unless they are checked. What is more, Bob thinks so, too.

Consider the facts: A boy named Arlington Brugh, from a little village in Nebraska, goes to a small town college. He does not play football, baseball, tennis or basketball and he graduates without being either a campus hero or a favored squire of the girls in his own class. And yet, a few months later, with the high-powered ballyhoo agents of Hollywood supplying the impetus, he is being interviewed about his opinions on love, his "technique" in the clinches, etc., ad nauseum. Ridiculous, when you strip the pill of its sugary coating.

The sad part is that such publicity campaigns always boomerang. The men in the audience (Hollywood refuses to consider them, but they pay the admission fee, nevertheless) definitely resent such hooey. And the adult women (they go to the movies, too) must feel cheated when they discover that the "great lover" is just a good-looking youngster.

Bob did not ask for all this—and he is proving his common sense by fighting against it. I hope he wins the fight.

Pat O'Brien made such a point of barring press photographers from the recent birthday party of his little adopted daughter, Mavourneen, that I accused him of "going Garbo" —and heard an explanation that does him credit. Seems that at previous parties, the news cameramen had singled out children whose parents are famous and completely ignored the other kids, who of course, felt bewildered and hurt by the discrimination.

Chatting with Joan Crawford the other day and the conversation drifted to price-kiting tactics of certain Hollywood merchants, who habitually double their prices whenever an in-the-money star enters their stores. Joan called my attention to a new painting hanging in her music room. "I first saw that in a Hollywood art gallery," she said. "I asked the price and was given a quotation out of all reason. Two days later the painting was sold to a casual non-professional shopper for exactly one-fourth the price I had been asked. I hope the gallery owner won't feel too chagrined when he discovers that the 'stranger' was my paid agent!"

Why is a simple fall always so embarrassing? With Alice Faye, I took a short cut across the ice of the huge rink where Sonja Henie's new picture was being filmed. Alice slipped, clutched wildly for my arm, missed and executed a perfect, inverted jack-knife. I helped her to her feet and asked her if she was hurt. Instead of answering, she stood stock still, her face flaming, and hurriedly looked to see who had noticed the spill. "Goodness," she said "I . . . I almost fell, didn't I?"

Had lunch with Sam Pokrass, now one of Hollywood's highest-paid composers and kidded him about the amount of food he stowed away. "A musician," he said gravely, "should always eat as if each meal were his last—it may be for some time." And then he told me some of the ups and downs in his career. Honestly, that man's life story makes the average scenario seem tame. On one occasion, shortly after his arrival in America, he landed in St. Louis, penniless. After tramping the streets for two days, he found a meal ticket, playing jazz in a river front honkytonk. And while he pounded the piano in that dive, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, in the opera house a few blocks away, presented selections from "Cyrano de Bergerac"—the work of a "distinguished European composer, Samuel Pokrass."

Insane Comedy Is Goofy Fun On Met Screen

"MARRY THE GIRL." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Edward Hope, featuring Mary Boland, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Mischa Auer, Charles Judels, Hugh O'Connell and Allen Jenkins, with Carol Hughes, Alan Mowbray, William B. Davidson, Irving Bacon, Bess Flowers, Olin Howland and Arthur Aylesworth. Directed by William McGann. Reviewed Friday evening by Sally Stroud at the Metropolitan.

"Marry the Girl" has a wacky collection of comedians who are given the insanest lines of the season to dress up a comedy which approaches the borderline of drawing room slapstick, without the custard pies. Edward Hope wrote a story about a brother and sister who own a newspaper and employed a group of amiable morons to run it. The movies have gone him one better.

There is a semblance of coherence: Hugh Herbert has the right to hire and fire (that he writes out his own dismissal slip matters little); Mary Boland thinks she can run the business better than Brother Herbert; Mischa Auer has designs on Niece Carol Hughes, whom Secretary Frank McHugh bashfully loves from a distance.

Solutions for Everything.

For every emergency which arises, there is some daffy solution which will probably cause you to laugh loudly, to the disgust of the grande dame in front of you who is wearing an umbrella-ish hat. So when she turns to glare, you have an opening to say "What a lovely day, please remove your hat." It probably won't be effective, so you may laugh now without moderation and let the glares fall where they may.

All the cast is somehow assembled in a sanitarium where George Washington roams the halls and the staff artist draws pictures on nurses' uniforms. Herbert gets tangled up with a stethescope for one of the funniest scenes since Chaplin's gastritis bit in his last picture. The niece leaves her beadstringing and attempts to elope with the Russian, but they are forstalled by a group of dastardly villians. She is really eloping with McHugh, who is emissary for Auer, and when the gangsters drive gentle Partridge (McHugh) too far, he turns and spits at them. Little did he ken his deadly accuracy with a rifle.

As is the habit now, with everyone loving someone else, it all concludes with Boland loving Auer, and Hughes loving McHugh. Leaving Woo-woo Herbert with naught but his "Rise and Fall of the House of Bourbon" to keep him happy.

Mr. Herbert is super-excruciating in this cozy flicker, and his final scene, where he pops away at a duck picture and the ducks rise quackingly to fly out of the frame, is an apt and fitting finale to a film that is unbelievably sappy in a way which cannot offend, only amuse.

More Insanity in Shorts.

Lennie Hayton features "Sweet Sue" in a band short. The only notable thing therein is a quaint gentleman who makes his fiddle recite "Jack and Jill." Curly, Larry and Moe, those skull-bumping stooges Ted Healy used to whack around, turn in an insane short about three scouts who lived in the days of Buffalo Billous and Bill Hiccough. Those are their names. The third is Just Plain Bill.

The newsreel is not free from the genial insanity which pervades the main portion of the bill. Don't miss the talking hot-dog. It will probably be the final stroke. Porky, the Pig, is mildly amusing in a cartoon about a race between an old engine and a modern streamliner.

On soberer thought, it might be ill-judged to recommend this feature widely, because those staunch folk who like good substantial suffering and glittering glamor for their screen fare will squirm in dismay at the puns, nitwitty situations and conglomerate madness of "Marry the Girl." But if you have ever laughed at Herbert, Boland, Auer, McHugh, et al, in other pictures, you will relish this one.

Allen Jenkins deserves a paragraph his own. As a tough gangster who don't take nuddin, see? he tosses off some nice mugging. And at the conclusion of a "torture" scene (with victim McHugh fixed in his mind as a Detroit hoodlum), he stumbles over a chair and falls flat. Which is something the show never does.

RKO-Keith's

Jim Fisk will continue to match his agile wits with the keenest minds of the Wall street of New York in Civil War times, buy costly trinkets for the adornment of his beloved Josie Mansfield and defy the Government in an attempted corner on gold for at least one more week of "The Toast of New York," on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

It is a picturesque, fast-moving and often flambuoyant film play that is unspooled in this rousing subject. There are humor in abundance, dramatic climaxes by the score and a quaint reproduction of the costumes and the customs of a distant era to be encountered in this fabulous tale of the medicine show hawker who was driven out of the deep South at the outbreak of the War Between the States, only to pit his own uncanny money sense against the cotton barons of Dixie, the financiers of Wall street and the integrity of the United States Treasury—and only to meet a tragic and a futile end as a result of the "Black Friday" precipitated by his raid on the gold market.

Balancing these largely monetary ramifications of the story is the romance between the actress' maid, who wished to become a great artiste on the stage herself, and the rising and flashy Fisk. Assuming all of the attributes and perquisites of the very rich, whether entitled to them or not, Jim Fisk lived a gaudy life in New York's most pretentious hotels. As wealth rolled in, he showered Josie Mansfield with jewels, built her a theater and backed her play. In the background always were his two righthand men, one in love with Josie but not admitting it, and she with him. In all of this there is material for rich melodrama. "The Toast of New York" has it in superabundance.

Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Cary Grant and Jack Oakie are cast in the principal roles—Arnold as Fisk, Miss Farmer as Josie. They wring from the script of the drama all of the sensationalism, romance and comedy of which it is possessed. Donald Meek lives wholly up to his name in the role of "Uncle" Daniel Drew, the crafty little man whose steamboats and Erie Railroad were coveted, and finally acquired, by the sagacious and equally crafty Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, one of the few parts not too convincingly played in the picture.

As a companion attraction this week, Keith's is presenting the new issue of the "March of Time," treating, as usual, of three timely topics—the spoils system in United States politics, a revolutionary educational experiment in summer camping and "Rehearsal for War," a new approach to the present civil conflict going on in Spain. These subjects, as always, are afforded thoughtful and painstaking elaboration.

Trans-Lux

The most artistocratic performers at the Trans-Lux this week are the Arabian horses that combine rhythm, poise, blue blood and intelligence in a way that makes the human race look a trifle backward. They even outclass the fashion manikins who parade with books on their heads to achieve balance, or the bathing beauties who are all trying to be Miss America in one slouching amble before a group of California judges who include—we thought he had retired to a monastery—Earl Carroll.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Ambassador Bullitt, Gen. Pershing, the Japanese army arriving in China, the foster parents who got into the baby row, the Duke and Wally, Joe Louis, Tommy Farr, and a new Italian dreadnaught share the news high spots. Screen Snapshots takes film fans back 17 years to see Valentino, Charlie Ray, Lillian Gish and many other cinema comets.

"Three Orphan Kittens" is in Disney's smart manner, while the travel short is on Venice.

Washingtonians will find the grocers' outing like old-home week, while the sports portion of the menu covers everything from putting down railroad tracks to win a bet to the blind-man boxing match the New York police staged for the youngsters. The Pan-American Exposition goes in for dog day, while the seeing dogs score high in another episode for which they deserve the best in publicity.

No Ferrell - Newsom Battle, Me Lads.

By Shirley Povich.

Mr. Clarke Griffith is very sorry that he is not able to offer the paying public a return performance of the Buck Newsom-Wes Ferrell pitching duel at Griffith Stadium during the current invasion of the Boston Red Sox. Mr. Griffith is very sorry, indeed.

POVICH.

Mr. Griffith does not want the paying public to think he is not in there battling to give 'em a show. He tried very, very hard to book another engagement for Newsom-Ferrell tomorrow. But Manager Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, refused to disturb his pitching schedule and said that he would pitch Newsom in turn—today.

And so Mr. Griffith is sorry that his customers cannot have their Newsom-Ferrell show. It is too bad, he said. And then he sighed. You'd sigh, too, if you saw the prospects of a $15,000 gate slip away. For Ferrell and Newsom packed 18,000 customers into the park on a Wednesday last June. It was the biggest week-day bonanza ever reaped by the Washington club's front office. And so, as I was saying, Mr. Griffith is quite inconsolable over the fact that the Washington fans cannot have their show again.

• • • •

But, to get to the meat of the thing, the Boston club is playing smart this time. They want no more of a Newsom-Farrell duel—in Washington. They want it for Boston where the Red Sox, as the home club, will get the home club's heavy share of the gate receipts. It's their turn, they figure. That's why Griffith couldn't book the show again.

• • • •

Members of the Metropolitan Police force are squawking loud and long at the regulations laid down by the Washington Club compelling policemen to be in uniform when they enter the pass gate. In former seasons, police off duty merely were required to show their badge number to be admitted to the games.

• • • •

In fact, Washington Club officials are asking the coppers to violate the rules when they demand that off-duty police wear uniforms or pay their way into the park.

• • • •

The squawking men in blue cite Section 10, Article 4, of the Metropolitan Police Manual: "Members of the force regularly assigned to active duty shall wear uniform only when actually on active duty or in going to and from the station house."

---

If you saw yesterday's ball game on a pass issued by the Washington Club—"Sh-h-h," don't breath a word to your friends about what happened at the game. If you do, you're violating the regulations under which the pass was issued and the club will be entitled to take the pass up.

It is all in black and white on the back of the little yellow tickets that are presented at the pass gate No. 4 among the conditions under which the pass is issued, reads as follows:

"By the acceptance and use of this pass, the holder agrees that he will not directly or indirectly transmit or aid in the transmission of any account, report or result (either partial or complete) of the baseball game or exhibition to which this pass intitles the holder to be admitted, beyond the limits of the park in which such game or exhibition is played."

• • • •

The regulation, of course, is directed toward the old practice of bootlegging reports of the games to radio stations which attempted to broadcast accounts without paying the club owners for the privilege. But, technically, the guy who tells his wife at dinner who won the ball game is subject to the forfeiture of his complimentary ticket.

---

The new bevel-edged home plate, designed to do away with the risk of breaking a leg when a ball player slides into home, claimed its first victim of the 1937 season three days ago when First Baseman Ripper Collins, of the Cubs, suffered a broken ankle.

• • • •

It was a severe blow to the Cubs, who were piling up an almost impregnable lead in the pennant race, inasmuch as Collins will be out of the game for a month and no capable substitute is available.

• • • •

But, if you want the irony of it all, here 'tis: The new bevel-edged, save-a-leg home plate was invented and sold to the big leagues this season by none other than Mr. John O. Seys, who happens to be vice president of the Cubs!

Gomez Gives A's 3 Walks In 'Big' 7th

Rothrock, Moses Drive Home Important Runs; Lazzeri Hits Homer.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—The last-place Athletics accomplished today what the first division of the American League has failed to do for weeks against the New York Yankees. Throwing a couple of their pitching youngsters, Buck Ross and Ed Smith, against the league leaders' batting dynamite, the A's stopped murderers' row cold with three hits for a 4-to-3 victory.

Only once before during this season have the Yanks been so humiliated, and for the last three weeks none of their first division rivals have been able to come within a mile of the performance the lowly Philadelphians turned in.

They won the ball game the hard way, too. Behind 3 to 1, they cashed in on Lefty Gomez' wildness in the seventh inning to score three runs and put the game on ice. Gomez, who flew from California and rejoined the Yankees just before the game started, breezed along easily until the seventh. Then he loaded the bases on walks and a pinch single by Jack Rothrock and a base hit by Wally Moses unloaded them.

A single by Lou Gehrig and an error by Catcher Earl Brucker gave the New Yorkers a run in the first, and Bill Dickey's double followed by Tony Lazzeri's eleventh homer added two more in the fourth.

That was the complete extent of the Yankee hitting and run-making. From the fourth on, Ross and Smith, who took over the assignment in the eighth after Rothrock pinch-hit for Ross in the seventh, hurled no-hit, no-run ball.

Missouri Outlaws Football Drinking

Columbia, Mo., Aug. 13 (AP).—There will be no drinking at University of Missouri football games this autumn—if the committee on intercollegiate activities has its way.

The committee has just passed a resolution that intoxicating liquors are not to be brought onto or consumed on university property.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, is slated to address a Labor Day rally at South Park, Pittsburgh.

Juggling Act by Higgins

Hartnett May Replace Terry as Giants' Pilot

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 13.—From the emphasis with which EDWARD ALOYSIUS BRANNICK, club secretary, denied there's slightest truth to story GIANTS are angling for Gabby Hartnett as manager in 1938, with Bill Terry moving upstairs, we won't be surprised when things begin to pop officially . . . If the GIANTS want personality-plus and field manager who will be of bigger help to the public relations department, HARTNETT is their man . . .

• • • •

TERRY, one of baseball's smartest pilots, hasn't had such good luck this year with his player deals . . . JACK McCARTHY, relegated to the bench by SAM LESLIE'S comeback, cost $40,000 in cash and players . . . The $25,000 deal for WALLY BERGER, who hasn't been hitting the size of his collar lately, also soured . . . Look out for that Gashouse Gang . . . They're moving back into the NATIONAL LEAGUE fracas without much help from the GREAT DEAN, and may turn loose one of those stretch drives . . . Remember how the Cubs came from nowhere with a 21-game winning streak to win in 1935?

RALPH IRVINE 'SASSE, wartime tank commander and Mississippi State's head grid coach, has been promoted to lieutenant colonel . . . He's now the youngest man of his rank in our army . . . RALPH'S old WEST POINT collaborator, MAJ. WALTER (CAPPY) WELLS, will do public relations work for national rifle and pistol shooting matches at CAMP PERRY this month . . .

Northwestern's WALTER PAULISON may be court-martialed for writing this "Speaking of the World's Series, it appears as if the Wildcats will have to buck the CUBS-YANKS embroglio again. The question now is whether the Northwestern-Michigan game can outdraw the fourth (and last) game of the series on Saturday, October 9" . . . NORTHWESTERN has a star sophomore backfield prospect, PAULISON adds, in JACK RYAN, JR., son of the old Dartmouth star and former Wisconsin coach.

International League has great six-club race—for second place . . . Up to today only eight games separated second and seventh-place teams, with NEWARK leading in first place by 23 games and JERSEY CITY in cellar spot by margin of 13½ games . . . The two jarring Joes of the big leagues, MEDWICK and DiMAGGIO, are our candidates for most valuable player awards this year . . . Somebody should tell MEDWICK he hasn't hit enough triples to lead the league . . . Cardinal clouter now ranks No. 1 only in batting percentage, total hits, runs scored, runs batted in, doubles and home runs.

Tacoma's FREDDIE STEELE, middleweight fistic champion, was star baseball and football prospect when he quit school for ring . . . OREGON and ST. MARY'S are about to patch up their grid differences and play again in 1938, report's the OREGONIAN'S L. H. GREGORY . . . Galloping Gaels won nine of their previous ten games.

Griffs Clout 2 Hurlers to Win Contest

By Shirley Povich.

Thanks to Pete Appleton, who threw a magnificent six-hit shutout performance at the Red Sox, we can dust off and again haul out that old gag:

"The Boston Red Sox, who cost Mr. Tom Yawkey $4,000,000, didn't even give Mr. Yawkey a run for his money yesterday."

Appleton, lately graduated from the bull pen, was something to see yesterday. The grizzled righthander who was discharged by the Red Sox a few years ago because he couldn't pitch very well, pitched very well, indeed as he ushered the Nats to their fifth straight victory.

Joe Cronin, Jimmy Foxx and Frank Higgins—the very nub of the Red Sox batting power—Appleton held hitless all afternoon. Eric McNair alone was able to collect more than one hit and McNair accumulated three, or exactly half of the Red Sox blows.

Thus Appleton, an early season disappointment, became the author of the only two shutout victories achieved by the Nats this season. Two weeks ago he blanked the Cleveland Indians, another of the teams who couldn't use him on their staff, by the same 3-to-0 score.

In only one inning did the Red Sox get more than one man on base—the sixth, when McNair and Chapman singled in succession with none out—but in that crisis Cecil Travis came up with a double-play ball off DeSautels' bat, scooped it to Buddy Myer, who relayed it to Kuhel and Pete's dreams of a shutout survived.

The Sox produced a mild threat in the ninth when Cramer singled with one out and the heavy end of the batting order due at the plate, but Appleton broke off a pair of curves to Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx, Travis and Stone caught their pop-ups and everything ended happily.

Cecil Travis' batting average suffered a drop of 2 points yesterday, but the Nats didn't exactly suffer from Travis' batting. Because he drove in the first two runs of the ball game. His one hit in four appearances at the plate left Travis with a figure of .386.

The Nats muffed their first chance to wring some runs out of big Johnny Marcum when Myer's attempted bunt went awry after Simmons and Kuhel led off the second inning with singles, but in the third inning they didn't muff.

Mel Almada, who was swinging with particular vigor against the team that exchanged him for Ben Chapman, thumped a double against the right-field fence to open the third inning, moved to third on Lewis' sacrifice and dashed home after Mills' catch of Travis' long fly in foul territory.

Appleton himself, personally, opened the two-run assault that drove Marcum from the box in the fifth inning. He whacked a line drive against the leftfield wall, but forgot to touch first base on his way to second and made his way back to the bag, content with a single.

Appleton slid into third on his face when Almada singled to right and Buddy Lewis scored him and pushed Almada to third with another single to right—the third straight hit off Marcum. Whereupon Lefthanded Freddie Ostermueller was called into the box. Travis grounded into a force play at second and the Nats' third run was home.

Ostermueller pitched until Rick Ferrell opened the seventh with a single and then advised Manager Joe Cronin he had pulled a muscle in his side. Rube Walberg replaced him and held the Nats safe after that. But his efforts were a wee bit tardy.

Cubs Set 1937 Mark In Beating Reds, 22-6

8 Cincinnati Arrors, 21 Hits Help League Leaders Run Up Score; Kampouris, Honored, Retaliates With 3 Misplays; Demaree Stars.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Pounding out 21 hits behind eight Cincinnati errors, the league-leading Chicago Cubs frolicked to the largest score of the major league season today as they pummeled the Reds 22 to 6 before a Ladies' Day crowd of 25,932 fans. The triumph kept the Bruins six and one-half games ahead of the second-place New York Giants.

After spotting the Reds a 4-to-0 lead in the second inning, the Cubs tied it up with four markers off Paul Derringer in their half of the second and then decided the contest with a nine-run splurge off Bill Hallahan and Joe Cascarella in the third.

The Bruins made eight hits and the Reds four errors in that frame as 14 batters paraded to the plate. As an encore, the Cubs came back for a single run off Jake Mooty in the sixth, two more in the seventh and a cluster of six on the eighth as ten more batters swung sticks.

Frank Demaree led the assault with a perfect day. The Cub outfielder had a triple, three singles and two walks. With the exception of another three-bagger by Stan Hack, all the other Cub blows were singles. Alex Kampouris, the Reds second baseman and only Greek regular player in the majors, was honored by fans before the game and contributed three errors, each of which figured in the Cubs' scoring.

The previous high team scoring total in the National League this season was Cincinnati's 21-to-10 victory May 9 over the Phillies. The previous American League high was by Detroit, which scored an 18-to-3 win over St. Louis May 30.

2 Home Runs Enable Tigers To Win, 7 to 6

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—Hank Greenberg paced Detroit to a 7-to-6 victory today in the opener of a four-game series with St. Louis.

The Detroit first baseman accounted for three hits in four times at bat, including a home run with two on that got the Tigers off to a flying start in the first. Greenberg's circuit clout was his twenty-sixth of the season.

Two successive walks and a pair of two-baggers by Joe Vosmik and Thomas Carey accounted for three runs in the second and tied the score. Charlie Gehringer's ninth home run of the season paved the way for a three-run splurge that enabled the Tigers to forge ahead in the third, however, and they added another in the fourth.

The Brownies shelled Jake Wade off the mound in the fifth, accounting for two runs with four hits that included doubles by Harland Clift and Roy Bell.

Giants Stop Plunge; Beat Phillies, 5-0

Hubbell Gives Up Only 6 Safeties as Mates Clout Foemen.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—The Giants threw in their "meal ticket," Carl Hubbell, today to stop a three-game losing streak, and he produced with a six-hit shutout for a 5 to 0 victory over the Phillies.

He was aided by a nine-hit attack on the part of his mates, who snapped out of the hitting doldrums with seven extra base clouts, including Harry Danning's sixth homer of the year and Sambo Leslie's third. Danning also got a single and drove in three runs. Leslie walloped a triple in addition to his homer.

The victory was Hubbell's sixteenth of the season, compared with six defeats, and marked his third shutout triumph of the year.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YANKEE SKIPPER, $20.40, $9.40, $5.00; BERRY PATCH, $8.80, $4.00; FOOLEM, $3.00.

YANKEE SKIPPER was steadied along for the first three furlongs, moved up on the inside thereafter, and taking command in the stretch, held away to the close. BERRY PATCH improved her position gradually after leaving the backstretch, and coming through on the inside at the stretch turn, closed with a rush. FOOLEM, unable to keep pace early, finished with good energy.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKETCH BOOK, $8.60, $4.20, $3.60; FRANCINE C., $3.60.

SKETCH BOOK was steadied along within striking distance of the leaders until leaving the backstretch, went to the front when called upon and increased her lead steadily in the last quarter mile, although bearing out through the last furlong. FRANCINE C., reserved early, moved up willingly when placed under pressure and closed with good courage. GOLD COLOR dropped back after rounding the far turn, swung to the outside in the stretch and was up in the closing stride to wear down FLY ME for third.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate for all but Kindred Spirit. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:10. Winner, M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE KING, $8.60, $4.40, $2.80; GOLDMAN, $8.40, $3.80; DIE HARD, $3.00.

WISE KING went to the front at once, was rated along under slight reserve when GOLDMAN went to the top, regained command when called upon, drawing clear when reaching the stretch, but hard ridden, just lasted to hold safe the bid of GOLDMAN. The latter moved into good lead in the opening quarter mile, was unable to go along with the leader when challenged, but catching the leader tiring in the last sixteenth, just missed being up in time. DIE HARD went well placed all the way and had no excuses.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBBLESOME, $10.40, $5.80, $3.60; NAVARRE, $6.00, $3.20; TROUPER, $2.00.

BUBBLESOME outran his field from the start, drew clear when straightening out on the backstretch, and rated along in front, held on gamely under pressure through the stretch and was never seriously threatened. NAVARRE responded gamely when placed under punishment in the last three-sixteenths, and while unable to reach the winner, was up in the closing strides to wear down TROUPER for the place. The latter was restrained early, moved up on the inside in the last five-sixteenths and under intermittent punishment through the stretch, held on well.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:16½. Winner, H. and H. Stock Farm's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK NOSE, $17.80, $6.20, $3.40; LADY TICHNER, $3.60; FLAGSTONE, $2.80.

BLACK NOSE moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch, wore down SAINT PIERRE for the command before reaching the half mile and drew out and was never threatened. LADY TICHNER, well placed all the way, moved up gamely when called upon and finished with good energy. FLAGSTONE moved up in the last five-sixteenths, although never in a position to menace the first two.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:47. Off 5:49. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Cane's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SQUARE, $15.00, $5.40, $3.20; DARK FRIEND, $4.00, $2.60; WULFSTAN, $2.80.

SQUARE was under slight reserve while following the pace for the first six furlongs, went to the front when called upon, drew clear, and although swerving at the finish, was never seriously threatened. DARK FRIEND was permitted to drop far out of it, and coming to the outside when nearing the stretch, came stoutly under pressure through the last three-sixteenths. WULFSTAN drew away into a long early lead, weakening in the last quarter mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 6:27. Winner, Mrs. C. C. Winter's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOHN TIO, $6.20, $4.20, $2.60; THIS WAY, $7.40, $3.60; DROLL STORY, $2.60.

JOHN TIO, away fast, was taken under steadying restraint and was waited with until the closing three furlongs, responded gamely when called upon, and wore down THIS WAY for the command, drawing out readily. THIS WAY, rated along back of the pace, went to the front when challenged by JOHN TIO, and despite holding on gamely, was unable to stave off the challenge of the winner. DROLL STORY moved up on the inside nearing the far turn, was blocked and had to ease back, was roused repeatedly in the stretch and closed willingly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK WAR, $4.00, $3.20, $3.00; CHARWITCH, $8.20, $5.40; BESS TAM, $13.00.

DARK WAR had speed from the start, met determined opposition from CHARWITCH, drew clear after rounding the far turn, and hard ridden through the stretch, held on gamely to the close. CHARWITCH moved up on the inside down the backstretch, made a determined effort to reach the winner, but was not good enough, although holding on in more determined fashion than usual. BESS TAM moved up steadily, and coming through on the outside at the last turn, closed with good courage.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 2:58. Off 3:00. Winner, G. Stamson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YANKEE SKIPPER, $20.40, $9.40, $5.00; BERRY PATCH, $8.80, $4.00; FOOLEM, $3.00.

YANKEE SKIPPER was steadied along for the first three furlongs, moved up on the inside thereafter, and taking command in the stretch, held away to the close. BERRY PATCH improved her position gradually after leaving the backstretch, and coming through on the inside at the stretch turn, closed with a rush. FOOLEM, unable to keep pace early, finished with good energy.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Winner, W. J. Hirsch's b. f. (2), by Zacaweista—Battle of Flowers. Trained by B. Blume. Value to winner, $675; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKETCH BOOK, $8.60, $4.20, $3.60; FRANCINE C., $3.60.

SKETCH BOOK was steadied along within striking distance of the leaders until leaving the backstretch, went to the front when called upon and increased her lead steadily in the last quarter mile, although bearing out through the last furlong. FRANCINE C., reserved early, moved up willingly when placed under pressure and closed with good courage. GOLD COLOR dropped back after rounding the far turn, swung to the outside in the stretch and was up in the closing stride to wear down FLY ME for third.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate for all but Kindred Spirit. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:10. Winner, M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE KING, $8.60, $4.40, $2.80; GOLDMAN, $8.40, $3.80; DIE HARD, $3.00.

WISE KING went to the front at once, was rated along under slight reserve when GOLDMAN went to the top, regained command when called upon, drawing clear when reaching the stretch, but hard ridden, just lasted to hold safe the bid of GOLDMAN. The latter moved into good lead in the opening quarter mile, was unable to go along with the leader when challenged, but catching the leader tiring in the last sixteenth, just missed being up in time. DIE HARD went well placed all the way and had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,100; claiming. The Cynwyd Purse. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place driving. Went to post 4:41. Off 4:43. Winner, Mrs. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBBLESOME, $10.40, $5.80, $3.60; NAVARRE, $6.00, $3.20; TROUPER, $2.00.

BUBBLESOME outran his field from the start, drew clear when straightening out on the backstretch, and rated along in front, held on gamely under pressure through the stretch and was never seriously threatened. NAVARRE responded gamely when placed under punishment in the last three-sixteenths, and while unable to reach the winner, was up in the closing strides to wear down TROUPER for the place. The latter was restrained early, moved up on the inside in the last five-sixteenths and under intermittent punishment through the stretch, held on well.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:16½. Winner, H. and H. Stock Farm's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK NOSE, $17.80, $6.20, $3.40; LADY TICHNER, $3.60; FLAGSTONE, $2.80.

BLACK NOSE moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch, wore down SAINT PIERRE for the command before reaching the half mile and drew out and was never threatened. LADY TICHNER, well placed all the way, moved up gamely when called upon and finished with good energy. FLAGSTONE moved up in the last five-sixteenths, although never in a position to menace the first two.

Miss Jedrzejowska Earns Finals Match With Alice Marble.

By the Associated Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Three of America's younger tennis stars and one comeback-bound veteran, Frank Shields, advanced to the semi-finals of the Eastern Grass Courts championships at the Westchester Country Club today as Poland's Jadwiga Jedrzejowska qualified for another meeting with Alice Marble, of San Francisco, Amelcan champion, in the women's singles final.

The largest week-day gallery ever to watch the tournament turned out to see two of the youngsters, top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, and New York, and Bobby Riggs, young Hollywood, Calif., star who has won nearly every tournament he entered this year, win the day's outstanding matches.

Surface Plays Well.

Parker, second in the national ranking, was forced to three sets to eliminate young Hal Surface, of Kansas City, "upset" star of the season, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4. Riggs, in the other half of the draw, slammed out a 6—2, 6—2 victory over John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., a former Davis Cupper, who had beaten him in the 1936 nationals.

Shields, who has been too busy as a film player during the past two years to do much as a tennis player, trounced Fumiteru Nakano, of Japan's Davis Cup team, 6—1, 7—5.

Rounding out the semifinals, Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, national junior champion, whipped Gerin Cameron, of Tulsa, Okla., 6—2, 11—9. Cameron yesterday turned in the biggest upset of the tournament when he eliminated the country's third-ranking player, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta.

Miss Jadrzejowska, who lost to Miss Marble at Seabright, N. J., after defeating her several times in England this year, reached the last round by routing Gracyn Wheeler, fourth-ranking American woman player, 6—3, 6—0.

Marble-Fabyan Win.

The final brackets in the women's doubles also were completed when Miss Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, downed the strong international team of Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, 7—5, 5—7, 6—1. In the other semifinal Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, of Austin, and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, whipped Miss Jadrzejowska and Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—1, 6—3.

In the men's doubles quarter finals, Don Budge and Gene Mako, the Davis Cup and Wimbledon doubles champions, turned back Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., 6—2, 3—6, 6—4, and Robert Kamrath, of Austin, and Lewis Wetherell, of Santa Ana, Calif., whipped Charles Carr, Los Angeles, and Henry M. Culley, Santa Barbara, Calif., 6—3, 6—4.

Armstrong Due In Town Today To Await Bout

Johnny Cabello, His Foe Monday Also Expected Today.

Henry Armstrong, sensational west coast featherweight, marking time on the road to the world championship, stops off in Washington today to await his fight Monday night against Johnny Cabello, Puerto Rican, in the 10-round feature of the weekly card at Griffith Stadium.

Winner of 14 straight knockout victories, the dusky dynamiter will arrive early this morning from New York, where he last night knocked out "Irish Eddie" Brink, Scranton, Pa. contender. Depending on his condition after the bout, Armstrong is expected to go through conditioning exercises at Turner's Arena.

Meanwhile, Cabello, his opponent, who was due to arrive in town yesterday, was forced to delay his arrival and is also expected to make his appearance this morning.

Completion of the entire card was announced yesterday by Turner's matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn. Ralph Buddy Scott, former Oklahoma golden gloves champion and former G. W. U. student, is scheduled to meet Frankie Donofrio, five times golden gloves champion of Philadelphia in the 8-round semiwindup. They are light-heavyweights.

Sandlot Loops Form Parent Organization

Maloney Elected to Head Group; Play-off for Titles Planned.

Organization was completed last night for a play-off series among the winners of all the amateur baseball leagues in Washington. At a meeting held in the offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the presidents of the various leagues elected as president of their organization Commissioner Walter H. Maloney, of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

The organization was tentatively called the National Capital Baseball Federation.

Judge Edward M. Curran, of the Police Court, was elected vice president; George Riley, executive secretary; Chris Heurich, jr., treasurer; Mike Sklar, of the Sport Center, recording secretary; John F. Maragon, public relations.

The board of directors will consist of the delegates to the new federation from each league, as follows: Stanley J. Tracey, U. S. Government League; William Flester, Industrial League; Roland Tabb, Bankers League; Victor Gauzza, Departmental League, National Capital League and Federal League; George D. Riley, Herald Government League; Mike Sklar, Sport Center League, and Marshall Finnan, assistant director, National Park Service.

Clark Griffith, Joe Judge and Arch McDonald were invited to serve on a board of arbitration in case of dispute in the playoff series.

The next meeting, to complete the organization and hear the report of rules and schedule committees, will be held next Wednesday evening in the Bureau of Investigation offices.

Harder Wins 7th; Defeats Chisox, 7-3

Indians' Hurler Allows Dykes' Crew Only 5 Safe Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—The Indians pushed their winning streak to four games today as Mel Harder held the Chicago White Sox to five scattered singles and his teammates bunched 10 hits for a 7 to 3 victory.

A wild throw by Catcher Billy Sullivan of the Indians helped the White Sox score two runs in the first inning.

Julius Solters led the Cleveland attack with a double and three singles and Earl Averill knocked in two runs and scored two himself on a double and single.

Harder, winning his seventh game of the season, had a painful day. He stopped two liners with his bare hand and was knocked down by a smash on the leg from Mule Haas' bat in the ninth inning. He insisted on finishing the game.

Juvenile Ball Tourney Lures Record Entry

63 Midget, Insect, Peewee Nines Already Entered in Play.

A city-wide juvenile baseball tournament for peewees, insects and midgets, the first of its kind in Washington, is giving indications of being a great success. Already an all-time record entry list has been recorded with 63 teams, embracing some 1,000 youngsters, already enrolled.

Joe Cohen, president of the Columbian League, is sponsoring the elimination tournament, purpose of which is to determine city champions to represent Washington in the recently organized Chesapeake Championship Series to be held in early September.

All teams, sponsored or otherwise, uniformed or not, are urged to submit their rosters to Columbian League headquarters, 713 Otis place northeast.

The tournament is scheduled to get under way late this month and Cohen is negotiating with Clark Griffith to secure the Stadium for the semifinals and finals.

Anyone desiring to reach Cohen may do so through CO. 2817.

Fette Bests Hoyt; Bees Victors, 5-2

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 13.—Lou Fette, the Boston Bees' ace rookie, bested Waite Hoyt and the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 2, today with the aid of a collapse on the part of the Brooklyn infield in the eighth inning.

Until that frame, he and Hoyt were hooked up in a tight mound duel with the score tied at 2-all. But a pair of errors by Cookie Lavagetto, Gene Moore's triple and Vince DiMaggio's homer in that inning gave the Bees three runs to break up the struggle and put the game on ice.

Fette fanned eight and allowed only six hits as he chalked up his fourteenth victory of the season against four defeats.

The Dodgers started off with two runs in the first inning, but the Bees tied it up in the third when Elbie Fletcher singled with runners on second and third.

Typo Baseball Play to Begin Here Monday

Teams From 10 Other Cities Will Compete in Annual Tourney.

The Union Printers of Washington are preparing for the first time since 1925 to receive teams from ten other large cities who are arriving for the twenty-seventh annual International Union Printer's Baseball Tournament.

The play is scheduled to begin Monday and continue through Saturday. Chicago is the defending champion and a favorite, while Washington's entry, successful in previous tournaments, is also expected to be a team to beat.

The tournament, one of elimination, with two losses constituting an elimination, will embrace nines from Baltimore, Chicago, New York, St. Paul, Indianapolis, Detroit, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and St. Louis, besides the local nine.

For the first time in many a year the locals will not be counting on their grand old veteran, Heinie Webb, to win them the title. Webb has been virtually inactive this season, but there are suspicions that he may be a surprise starter. George Mosedale, Carl Beane and Charley Bray comprise the pitching staff which will be used.

Others slated to see action include catchers Mac McPherson, Rip Sole and John Kerr; infielders Fred Waple, Ed Edwards, Harry Hoffberg, Ray Homan, Tom Dalgish and Phil Boundford, and outfielders Jimmy Dewhurst, Benny Schneider, Jim Halloran, and Chick Holbrook.

The tournament games will be played on the Ellipses with one daily scheduled for Griffith Stadium at 11 a. m.

Solar Hawks' Rush Wins Chicago Race

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—Solar Hawk came with a rush in the stretch to catch Miss Dolphin at Lincoln Fields today, carrying Emerson F. Woodward's colors to victory in the featured Lake Calumet Purse. Solar Hawk wore down the pacemaker to win by one length, with Virginia J. five lengths back in third place.

Nine went to the post in the Lake Calumet, in which Hy Sonny was made a slight favorite. Miss Dolphin, 20-to-1 in the betting, took the lead shortly after the start from Odessa Girl and drew away from the field as they rounded the turn. Jockey Porter Roberts, on Solar Hawk, was in the middle of the pack and worked his way up steadily on the Texas colt. When the stretch was reached Solar Hawk was in second place, trailing Miss Dolphin by three lengths.

Lookouts to Keep Bagner for Present

Harry Bazner, No. 1 pitcher of the Nats' Chattanooga farm team, will not be recalled pending the proposed sale of the club to Chattanooga fans, Clark Griffith announced yesterday.

The Nats' owner, who had ordered Bazner to report to the Washington club immediately, canceled that order yesterday. If the Chattanooga team is sold, Bazner will join the Nats. If not, he will remain with Chattanooga. Bazner, a right-hander, has won ten games and lost eight this season.

Griffith indicated that Chattanooga interests had asked for an extension of time in their efforts to raise money for the purchase of the Nats' farm team.

Bank Deposits June 30 Second Highest Total

26.7 Billion Compares With 27.6 Billion December 31 Last Year.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor announced yesterday that the total deposits of the 5,299 active national banks in the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands of the United States, on June 30, the date of the last call made for statements of condition, aggregated $26,765,913,000, exceeding by $250,803,000 the amount reported by the 5,311 active banks on March 31, the date of the previous call, and exceeding by $565,460,000 the amount reported by the 5,374 active banks as of June 30, 1936, the date of the corresponding call a year ago.

The deposits on June 30, 1937, which were exceeded in amount on only one other call date in the history of the national banking system, namely, December 31, 1936, when they aggregated $27,608,397,000, consisted of demand and time deposits of individuals, partnerships, and corporations of $12,430,183,000 and $7,469,842,000, respectively; United States Government deposits of $379,331,000; State, county and municipal deposits of $2,203,466,000; postal savings of $88,542,000; deposits of other banks of $3,790,587,000; and certified and cashiers' checks, cash letters of credit and travelers' checks outstanding, etc., of $403,962,000.

The time deposits of individuals, partnerships and corporations included time certificates of deposit of $591,423,000; time-deposits, open accounts of $305,715,000, and deposits evidenced by savings pass books of $6,511,352,000, the latter figure representing 15,794,219 accounts.

The net demand plus time deposits held were $23,099,794,000, against which reserves of $3,610,134,000, or 15.63 per cent, were required by law to be carried with reserve banks. The reserves held, however, were $4,163,789,000, or 18.03 per cent, representing an excess of $553,655,000.

The total assets on June 30, 1937, were $30,337,071,000, an increase of $287,899,000 since March and an increase of $634,232,000 in the year.

Loans and discounts of $8,807,782,000 showed an increase of $338,578,000 since the previous call on March 31 and an increase of $1,048,633,000, or 13.61 per cent, since the June call of last year.

Investments in United States Government obligations direct and fully guaranteed were $8,219,195,000 in comparison with $8,165,225,000 on March 31, 1937 and $8,447,364,000 on June 30, 1936.

Business Failures Drop to 18-Year Low

Boston, Mass., Aug. 13.—For five consecutive years commercial failures have decreased until the total in the first six months of this year was the lowest for any like period in 18 years. Average liability has dropped to $12,000 compared with $16,500 last year and close to $20,000 in the first half of 1928.

Alleghany Deal Seeks to Avoid Tax on Merger

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—Robert R. Young, New York financier, favoring early merger of two top holding companies of the Van Sweringen rail empire, testified here today that he sought such action to preclude payment of any merger tax Congress might enact in the future.

Young testified in Circuit Court No. 2, opposing two suits which ask an injunction to prevent the merger of the Chesapeake Corporation and the Alleghany Corporation, the holding companies. Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis is presiding.

Under direct examination, Young said he felt certain Congress would continue to enact holding-company legislation and that eventually any such merger would entail payment of Federal taxes by the Chesapeake Corporation. The corporations could be merged now without such payment, he added.

Chesapeake Earnings.

The Chesapeake Corporation owns 55 per cent of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Co. stock and the Alleghany Corporation owns 71 per cent of the Chesapeake Corporation stock. Young testified the Chesapeake & Ohio had excellent earnings last year, "much better than it will have for some years to come."

Shortly after the hearing started here, the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington announced it had ordered both holding companies to furnish additional information to stockholders before a vote is taken on the merger. Attorneys said the order had been agreed to by both sides.

Wheat Prices Yield After Sharp Rally

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Worse threshing returns in Canada than were expected did much today to run Chicago wheat prices up an extreme of 2⅜ cents a bushel. Lively profit-taking sales at the last, however, virtually wiped out wheat market gains here. On the other hand, aggressive demand from export and milling interests was a feature of wheat trade at Winnipeg, where quotations bounded up 2½ cents over the previous close.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were exactly unchanged to ⅜ of a cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, Sept. $1.12⅝-¾, Dec. $1.13½-⅝, May $1.15-1.15⅛, corn ¼-⅜ up, Sept. 97½-⅝, Dec. 66-66¼, May 67½, oats unchanged to ¼ advanced, Dec. 29½-⅝, and rye showing ⅛-1⅛ bulge, Dec. 80¼. Provisions results varied from 5 cents setback to an equal gain.

Steel Leads Stocks to Higher Ground in More Active Trading; Cotton Advances.

New York, Aug. 13.—Higher prices for speculative markets in more active trading gave the day a rather cheerful tone. Government bonds, on the other hand, again were soft. Stocks rose briskly in the late trading, many of the leaders gaining 1 to 3 points. Cotton bounded forward and grains closed higher. September wheat ended a quarter of a cent up at $1.12⅝ a bushel.

Backwash from the sudden announcement yesterday afternoon of President Roosevelt's selection of Senator Black for the Supreme Court vacancy had no more apparent effect on markets than had the first news. Markets acted as though they were resigned to hope for the best, expecting confirmation of the appointment as well as the casting of a vote regularly for all New Deal legislation to come before the court. Fortunately, existing members of the court are not to be considered mere sounding boards, and perhaps even the rumors of another resignation or two may prove to be premature.

Finally there is rising hope that Congress will pay increasing attention to the probable effects of reform measures on our business and social life and give less heed merely to the desire of the Administration to have all its suggestions immediately made law. Any court will pass muster so long as Congress acts independently of the executive and in the interest of the country and not of a class or of some one with a bright idea.

Autumn Trade.

Odds and ends of industrial statistics at the week-end worked no damage to the hope that the fall will bring some revival to trade, partly seasonal and partly created by the unusually abundant cash crops. So long as the prices received by growers are not palpably unprofitable at no matter what quantity of production, the larger the harvests the greater the income of the agricultural districts as a whole.

Cotton farmers and wheat farmers as well may have counted some chickens in advance. They may have made financial commitments based on estimated bushels of wheat and bales of cotton that now cause easiness when the harvest is multiplied by current prices, which are below those prevailing a month or so ago. Both wheat and cotton are nevertheless bringing the growers prices per unit that are highly profitable under anybody's method of calculation, and dole or no dole, farm income this year will be the largest since the depression began.

While trade statistics, especially the crop figures, continue to give oxygen to the hope that the autumn will bring a brisk revival in business and the usual heavy dividend distributions under the profits tax, the speculative tinge here and there suggested also that the market may be becoming somewhat receptive again to inflationary matters. On the Supreme Court issue, for example, if it is to be assumed that the Court is to be made safe for any and every New Deal proposal that gets past Congress, much of the obstruction in the path of inflation will disappear.

Cotton Loan.

Another development of the day that bore heavily on the side of inflation was the assurance given by Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, where the cotton boll weevils and the like come from, that President Roosevelt had agreed to 12-cent cotton loans, and that similar "loans would be extended to the Northern producers of cattle, hogs, corn, and wheat." All that would be likely for further heavy increases in the public debt and the spending of money, whatever the long-term effects might be.

Some of the sharpshooters in the cotton futures market supposed that, with cotton at 10.40 cents a pound, a 12-cent loan plan ought to guarantee a rise. In a few minutes the market jumped $1 a bale as the theory was put into action. Speculators said that 12-cent loans meant cotton would be held off the market at any price under that figure. They reported their convictions with the supposition that the loans would be accompanied by some scheme to reduce acreage, as a gesture of protection for the Treasury. In a long run a vast amount of cotton standing the holder, Uncle Sam, 12 cents a pound held off the market will tend to depress the price, insure the accumulation of still more cotton to hang over the market, and encourage the planting of cotton in other countries.

Credit.

Some credit expansion took place in the past week, and in spite of the sharp drop in New York bank excess reserves, excess reserves for the country rose $40,000,000. Circulation expanded moderately, perhaps marking the beginning of the autumn buying season and reflecting the marketing of grain and livestock. The most significant item was the further rise of $35,000,000 in the monetary gold stock. Gold is again flowing to this country at about the former rate. Gold stock is now $12,500,000,000 and the sterilized fund is at a new high record.

World Industry For Half Year All-Time Peak

Production in Ten Major Countries Passes High Point of June, 1929.

By the Associated Press.

The world industrial output reached the highest level in history during the first six months of this year. The Department of Agriculture said yesterday that production, as estimated in the 10 leading international trade countries, had advanced steadily from the low point in the middle of 1932 so that the predepression high point production in June, 1929, was exceeded in December, 1936.

Countries in the survey were the United States, United Kingdom, Germany, France, Italy, Japan, Canada, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

"A part of the recovery in foreign industrial production has been associated with increased military expenditures," the report said.

Bob Burns Says—

Almost every important undertaking has to be guided by an experienced hand. My aunt happened to get ahold of my cousin's Boy Scout Manual one time and she got so fascinated with the chapter on how to render first aid that she practiced for days on how to put on a bandage. I'll never forget how thrilled she was the day they went on a picnic and my cousin broke his leg. My aunt was so happy that she knew just what to do.

She grabbed grandpaw's cane, broke it in half to make two splints and then she tore off her petticoat to make the bandage and she went to work and made the prettiest bandage you ever saw. She figgered they didn't need a doctor for the boy but she called a doctor in just so she could show off the bandage. When the doctor looked at the bandage and asked who put it on, my aunt stepped forward and proudly says, "I did. What do you think of it?" The doctor says, "It's a perfect job. I never saw one prettier, but" he says "you only made one little mistake. You bandaged the wrong leg!"
